1989. Act 31 requires all public school districts and pre-service teacher programs to provide accurate instruction on the history, culture, and tribal sovereignty of all 11 American Indian Nations in Wisconsin.

Oneida drum group 'Wind Eagle' performed at the opening of the event and celebratory music was performed by Oneida's Music from Our Culture (MOC) Youth Singers while dinner was served. Oneida Nation Education and Training Area Manager Jennifer Hill-Kelley, who served as the Master of Ceremonies for the event, also presented Green Bay Area Public Schools Curriculum Coordinator Angela La Combe with a gift for being recognized as the 2018 Act 31 Champion.

Dr. Tony Evers, Wisconsin State Superintendent of Public Instruction, lauded the efforts of those that struggled to bring the legislation to fruition and the now clearly evident results. "We are seeing statewide graduation rates of American Indian children go from 67 percent in 2010 to almost 80 percent today," Evers said. "That's an extraordinary achievement and I do believe it's due (in part) to Act 31."

"The requirement of American Indian Studies in Wisconsin is critical to ensuring that all children have a holistic understanding of the significance of tribes throughout the United States and more specifically in our home state," Dr. Jolene Bowman, President of the National Indian Education Association and Vice President of the Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohicans, said.

The keynote speakers for the event, retired Oneida Nation Education and Training Area Manager Norbert Hill, Jr., and William "Bill" Gollnick, were also on hand to provide historical insight into America's true past and the impact of Act 31 on the Oneida Nation. Hill said parents need to continue to prepare their young students for the academic rigors of high school and college. "(Many of us) won't be here in 50 years but they will be," Hill said. "They'll have children and grandchildren. We need (to get them) to write about, talk about, and understand what it means to be native. You can't run from who you are or where you came from."

Gollnick has served in a variety of critical roles with the Oneida Nation for more than 30 years. "Act 31 became this hoard of activity," Gollnick said. "Developing content for teachers and student-teachers, developing materials and training, going before every forum we could...we found that many teachers were up to the challenge. They wanted to grow and learn and bring something forward to improve what we had in the old schools. Act 31 has been a positive contributor to a better central policy in the state. I look forward to the next step and the initiatives of our next generation."

Following the event Dr. J P Leary, Associate Professor of First Nations Studies, History, and Humanities at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, signed copies of his recently released book "The Story of Act 31: How Native History Came to Wisconsin Classrooms."

Sixth Annual Oneida Elder Expo

Hundreds of area elders came together on Aug. 8 at the Raddison Hotel and Conference Center for the 6th Annual Elder Expo. Sponsored by Oneida Elder Services, the expo is designed to bring elder-related Brown County resources together to showcase their programs and services. Lunch was provided for the visitors, raffles were held, and two $500 college scholarships were also awarded as part of the Roberta J. Kinzhuma Memorial Scholarship Fund. The two scholarship recipients were Niki Warnke of Green Bay and Zoe Webster of Drexel Hill, Pa.

Settlement reached in hemp lawsuit

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A Wisconsin tribe has reached a settlement with the state's attorney general over its plans to grow hemp.

The St. Croix Chippewa Indians of Wisconsin filed the federal lawsuit in February against state Attorney General Brad Schimel, saying he objected to the tribe's plans for processing hemp.

The parties reached an agreement that allows the tribe to oversee hemp production to produce cannabidiol, or CBD oil, on reservation lands, St. Croix tribal attorney Jeff Cornell told Wisconsin Public Radio.

The settlement says Wisconsin won't interfere with a tribal ordinance that governs a control program and regulatory body to oversee hemp cultivation and processing. The tribe also agreed to notify the state of any changes to its ordinance.

"That as long as the tribe is only dealing with hemp, that the state will not exercise any jurisdiction," said Cornell.

Cornell said the tribe hopes to generate new revenue for housing, health care and law enforcement with its hemp production plans.

"New streams of revenue are always needed and definitely this is something that St. Croix is looking at as a new, very lucrative area to provide additional funds to help support tribal membership," he said. "That being said, the tribe is also a large believer that CBD oil has significant health benefits."

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved a purified form of CBD last month to treat seizures associated with severe forms of epilepsy.

A Wisconsin DOJ spokesman didn't return a request for comment by the newspaper on the settlement.

Oneida Public Transit changes times for children

Effective School Year 2018-2019—Oneida Public Transit (OPT) will be changing our times at which we can pick-up and/or drop-off children at schools. OPT will be able to schedule a drop-off between the hours of 9AM-1PM and a pick-up between 4pm-8pm. These are outside of normal school start and end times and should be used in the case of a child missing the bus, doctor's appointment, and/or for after school activities and programs.

Also, the ages in which the children can ride alone will be changed. Children ages 11 and under must be accompanied with someone who is at least 16 years of age and older. 12+ years can ride alone.

Main reasons for these changes are for the safety of the children and our transit drivers.

School Safety Concerns:

- OPT isn't conformed the way the school buses are with proper lights, signs and paint color, which is a safety hazard for both children and drivers.
- Schools don't provide OPT a designated pick-up and drop-off area for students, which could put a child in danger when boarding and departing the transit bus.

• Due to the size of OPT vehicles, it has become a hazard to maneuver in between the before or after school traffic.

Age Safety Concerns:

- OPT is an on-demand, shared ride service that doesn't require a driver to look for a child when picking up, nor are they responsible for the child once they step off the bus.
- OPT is also a shared-ride, which means the transit may have additional pick-ups and drop-offs along the way and OPT doesn't do background check on any passengers.

These changes will not affect pick-ups from the Recreation and County H, as they are grouped onto one or two bus(es) with no additional pick-ups.

After school programs that need transportation should contact Oneida Public Transit to schedule and should have at least 5+ students that will need transportation.

Again, we will only be scheduling between 9AM-1PM or 4PM-8PM effective 2018-2019 school year and Children/Youth must be 12 years old or older to ride alone.

Thank you for your understanding and we apologize for any inconvenience. For more information please call Oneida Public Transit 920-496-5770.

Gerzetch returns from Space Camp

The weeklong educational program promotes science, technology, engineering and math (STEM), while training students and with hands-on activities and missions based on teamwork, leadership and problem solving.

This program is specifically designed for trainees who have a particular interest in space exploration. Gerzetch spent the week training with a team that flew a simulated space mission to the International Space Station (ISS). Once aboard the ISS, the crew participated in experiments and successfully completed an extra-vehicular activity (EVA), or spacewalk. Gerzetch and crew returned to earth in time to graduate with honors.

Space Camp operates year-round in Huntsville, Alabama, and uses astronaut training techniques to engage trainees in real-world applications of STEM subjects. Students sleep in quarters designed to resemble the ISS and train in simulators like those used by NASA.

More than 750,000 trainees have graduated from Space Camp since its inception in Huntsville, Alabama in 1982, including European Space Agency astronaut, Samantha Cristoforetti and NASA astronauts Dottie Metcalf-Lindenburger, Dr. Kate Rubins and Dr. Serena Auñón, who recently launched to the International Space Station. Children and teachers from all 50 states and 69 international locations have attended a Space Camp® program.

Wisconsin sees democracy decline, reflecting US discontent

By NICOLE KI of Wisconsin Center for Investigative Journalism

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Seven years ago, at age 73, Sheila Plotkin stepped onto the glossy tiles of the Wisconsin State Capitol with a protest sign in hand and her husband by her side. She saw a sea of law enforcement.

Due to increased security, police officers escorted the couple and other members of the public to the Senate. There, Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald was signing a contempt order for 14 Democratic senators who fled the state to avoid voting for the controversial budget repair bill - later called Act 10 - that all but ended collective bargaining rights for public sector employees in Wisconsin.

As Plotkin, a retired teacher, and her husband left, the elevator unexpectedly stopped at the second floor. Plotkin said an officer stepped forward and took their photo.

Plotkin told protesters gathered outside that she felt like she was in a "czar's castle" being escorted by "the palace guard."

"I was so angry. I was so distraught," Plotkin recalled. "I said, 'This is not my Wisconsin,' and then I broke down and started to cry."

Since that moment in March 2011 - after weeks of protests that drew national attention with crowds estimated at up to 100,000 people - Plotkin found it distressing to see Wisconsin's democracy being "nibbled away."

"Most people believe government no longer represents the people," Plotkin said. "It represents campaign donors, special interests, the wealthy."

Plotkin is among the growing segment of Americans questioning the strength of democracy. A recent poll commissioned by the bipartisan Democracy Project found that over two-thirds of Democrats, Republicans and independents feel very or somewhat concerned about the current state of American democracy.

The Edelman Trust Barometer, which has been gauging public faith in institutions in the United States and elsewhere for 18 years, said 2018 saw the "steepest, most dramatic general population decline the Trust Barometer has ever measured," with just 33 percent of the public expressing trust in the government - down 14 points from 2017.

"The public's confidence in the traditional structures of American leadership is now fully undermined and has been replaced with a strong sense of fear, uncertainty and disillusionment," according to Edelman, a global communications marketing firm.

Aside from voting,

Wisconsin residents have a limited number of remedies when they disagree with their elected leaders. In some other states, voters can initiate and even overturn decisions made by elected officials. Wisconsin voters do not have those options, but they have one potentially potent weapon: recall.

Eighteen other states allow for citizens to recall their elected officials. Just 10 states, including Wisconsin, include provisions for recalling any elected member of government. The others have specific stipulations, such as Illinois, where only the governor can be recalled.

That is how Orville Seymer got his start in political activism in 2002. Seymer was part of Citizens for Responsible Government, which formed after news reports revealed that hundreds of Milwaukee County employees, including then-County Executive Tom Ament, stood to collectively earn up to $900 million in additional pension payments.

The citizens group launched a series of recall elections against Ament and county board members who had voted for the so-called backdrop payments. When Seymer and his compatriots hit the streets to gather 73,000 signatures in 60 days to recall Ament, the response was overwhelming: 182,957 signatures in just 28 days.

"Something like this had never hit Wisconsin before. It was wild pandemonium," Seymer said.

The scandal eventually forced Ament and seven board members out of office and launched now-Gov. Scott Walker into the county executive's seat. In 2012, Walker himself was recalled, but a majority voted to re-elected him as governor.

Unlike Plotkin, some political observers in Wisconsin say the power of the individual is actually getting stronger. Brett Healy, president of the conservative-leaning think tank the MacIver Institute, said there are numerous organized and well-funded groups for Democrats, Republicans and special interests that people can join to exert influence.

"If you care about democracy, your country, your state, you're going to join with others and make your opinions heard," Healy said.

In Wisconsin, the percentage of residents saying they strongly or somewhat agree that the government is run by "a few big interests looking out for themselves" has gone from 79 percent in 2013 to 84 percent in

Many plants can be poisonous to pets and livestock

By Dean Fosdick
Associated Press

Not all plants are wholesome for foraging animals.

Certain species of milkweed, for example, that are highly valued as host plants for the dwindling monarch butterfly population, are extremely poisonous to pets and to range animals like sheep, cattle and goats. Even free-ranging chickens aren't immune. Among potentially toxic poultry pickings are castor beans and certain mushrooms, although chickens don't eat them as readily as do animals.

Plant toxicity is directly related to dosage. How many were eaten, how healthy was the animal, how long do the toxins persist and what can be done?

Some plants, like water hemlock, "can kill a cow in 15 minutes, while others, like buttercups, just leave a burning sensation in their mouths or tongues," said Donna Foulk, an Extension educator with Penn State University.

Ornamental plants either in or outside the home are frequently toxic, she said.

Animal poisoning can be tough to diagnose, but symptoms range from difficulty breathing to refusing food, blistering and skin lesions to dizziness and diarrhea. Call a vet immediately if such conditions arise.

Many weed varieties aren't toxic unless environmental conditions make them so. "If plants pick up a lot of nitrogens from rain and rapid growth, and animals eat a lot of them, they can die," said Mark Renz, a University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension weed scientist.

The problem becomes even more acute during dry weather when pasture grasses go dormant and troublesome but persistent weeds become more enticing as fodder.

Most of those weeds are unpalatable to animal taste buds but often are eaten when dried and mixed with other materials, like in a hay bale.

"I know of a case where a llama died from eating baled hay that had milkweed in it," Renz said.

Pet owners may know that daffodil, tulip and hyacinth bulbs can be potentially poisonous to weed-grazing dogs, while Asiatic lilies can cause kidney failure in plant-eating cats.

But people new to small scale or urban farming may not be aware that the roots and seeds of cabbage and broccoli can trigger digestive problems in pigs; foxglove or digitalis can produce irregular heart rates and rhythms in horses; rhubarb and tomato leaves can cause neurological damage to rabbits; iris rootstocks can result in breathing problems and scours in cattle; and as few as three medium to large oleander leaves can be lethal to llamas.

What can be done to limit plant poison risks?

"Try to know what's out there, what's toxic, and their symptoms," Renz said.

Additional suggestions from a Penn State University fact sheet:

-Keep animals healthy by maintaining good nutrition.

-Eliminate or fence around any poisonous plants or trees in and adjacent to pastures.

-Mow pastures to reduce weeds.

-Do not throw garden or lawn clippings into pastures and do not plant trees, ornamental shrubs or plants near barns or pastures.

It can be risky to let dogs and cats wander around lawns or gardens after herbicides and pesticides have been applied. "But in most urban settings, most of the chemicals have been tested and are fairly innocuous," Renz said.

2015, according to surveys by the Marquette University Law School Poll. Results showed that Democrats and independents were consistently more pessimistic than Republicans on this point.

A 2017 Marquette survey also found that just 47 percent of Wisconsin residents polled said they trusted state government "to do what is right" either "just about always" or "most of the time."

Former state Sen. Tim Cullen believes several factors have led to the weakening of citizen power. He cited hyper-partisanship, the need to raise significant campaign donations and officials' desires to be re-elected.

A Democrat from Janesville, Cullen served in the Senate in the 1970s and '80s and again from 2011 to 2015. After he returned to public life, Cullen said he noticed that legislators seem to act primarily in allegiance to their parties in order to keep their jobs.

"The political system is rigged in a way that in their own self-interest of getting re-elected - which is an overwhelmingly important thing to most of them - it doesn't help them get re-elected to be working with the other party," said Cullen, who served as majority leader during his first stint in the Legislature.

Jacob Stampen, a University of Wisconsin-Madison emeritus professor of educational leadership and policy analysis, said his research reveals a growing partisanship that has made state lawmakers more indebted to party bosses than to the public. Stampen has been tracking voting in the Wisconsin Legislature since 2003. His first analysis of voting was as a graduate student at UW-Madison in the mid-60s.

He said back then, Wisconsin politicians coalesced around ideas and not just party affiliation. He described it as a "healthy political system" in which lawmakers were "much more constituency-oriented."

When he again started tracking every legislative vote in 2003, Stampen said he noticed a sharp increase in partisanship. He believes corporate influence has drowned out the interests of citizens.

"Overall, I conclude that in the 1980s and 1990s, Wisconsin's political system became increasingly polarized, dependent on financial support from lobbyists, and corrupt," Stampen said in a paper about Wisconsin legislative politics from 1966 to 2006.

Dale Schultz, a former Republican state senator, also observed that politicians are more attentive to big campaign donors than citizens. The public is frustrated, the former majority leader said, because elected officials "never take the time to listen to them or get to know them" - an exercise that would give citizens more influence by subjecting officials to questioning and examination.

Kathy Cramer, a UW-Madison professor of political science and author of a book about Walker's rise in Wisconsin, said recent scholarship confirms that "policy decisions most closely correspond to the political leanings of the wealthiest people in the population, and not so much to other people."

Kenneth Mayer, a UW-Madison professor of political science, said other states allow for more direct public input and responsiveness through initiatives and referenda in which citizens make laws directly. In all, 26 states have mechanisms that allow voters to propose laws through initiatives or overturn laws by popular referendum, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Wisconsin does not have an initiative process. And any referenda are initiated by governmental bodies - not citizens. A bipartisan bill to give Wisconsin voters the power of initiative and referendum was introduced in 2017 but failed to get a hearing.

Many citizens in other states are utilizing an initiative process to directly create legislation, most notably in the legalization of marijuana. Of the nine states that have now fully legalized marijuana, eight of them did so through an initiative process, and only one - Vermont - through the legislative process.

Plotkin, a retired teacher of 28 years who lives in McFarland, formed a citizens' group, We, the Irrelevant, after the summer of 2015, when the Legislature voted in a surprise move to severely weaken the public records law by exempting key government records. This deeply unpopular move later was removed from the budget by Walker and the GOP legislative leaders.

The group uses public records requests to gauge the power of citizens to influence Wisconsin state government.

Plotkin began by examining three bills. One dissolved the nonpartisan Government Accountability Board, the state's ethics and campaign watchdog, replacing it with separate elections and ethics commissions with appointees of both parties.

A second bill exempted politicians from John Doe investigations, such as the one thrown out by the right-leaning Wisconsin Supreme Court that had probed coordination between Walker's campaign and conservative groups.

The third bill raised campaign contribution limits, allowed candidates to coordinate with so-called issue-ad groups and eliminated the requirement that campaign contributors list their employers.

"I began to ask myself, 'Who's asking for these changes? Are citizens asking for this? Are they hearing from constituents saying 'Get rid of the GAB?'" Plotkin said.

The short answer? No. The group found that Republicans who currently run the Legislature had received 6,215 letters, emails and phone calls against those three bills and 312 in favor. Despite the overwhelming public opposition, all three measures passed.

Robert Rolley, a retired Department of Natural Resources wildlife research biologist, said he has seen regular citizens lose influence to business interests since Walker took office.

"There is a long history in the DNR of listening to public input prior to making management decisions," said Rolley, who worked at the agency for 25 years. "What has changed is which citizens the DNR Board and administration is interested in listening to."

Plotkin said she fears many people feel they no longer have influence on government.

"Indifference is a killer of democracy, and I'm hoping if Donald Trump has done nothing else, he has awakened those people who never thought voting mattered. If he's made enough of them angry, I hope they vote."

Shekoli,

Many of our children and grandchildren will be returning to school in the upcoming weeks. While they are doing their part in learning, we all do our part to contribute by creating a community and home for them to thrive. For many of us who live near the reservation, that may mean working for Oneida Nation to provide for our families.

The recent Economic Impact study talked about the Nation's positive economic impact on the region, so this month I would like to highlight a few of the good things about Oneida Nation as an employer and how through employment, the Nation provides for individuals and their families.

First of all, I'd like to give a special "Yawáko" to all the employees who work around the clock and on holidays to meet the needs of our customers. There are perks of being an employee of the Nation that unfortunately can prove to be more challenging to take advantage of for those who work in our revenue generating divisions. For example, due to the nature of the business and the customer demands, Gaming may be unable to be as flexible with scheduling, but with input from frontline employees and supervisors have found creative solutions.

Fortunately, employees who work on holidays receive pay for their hours worked, holiday pay, and time and a half. The Nation also often provides incentive pay for certain days throughout the year including New Year's Eve and Easter. Oneida pays employees for 11 holidays annually, including Oneida Day and Code-talker Day, and also has a generous time off program based on years of service.

Oneida Nation, as an employer, also works to support healthy individuals and healthy families by providing opportunities that inspire Yukwatsístayá (our fire, our spirit within each one of us) through resources that provide care for our minds, bodies and spirits. Employees have access to exceptional medical, dental and vision benefits and multiple educational programs and courses offered year round. Attending programming not only provides knowledge and skills for health and wellness, but also helps reduce the cost of employee's insurance premiums.

Oneida Family Fitness provides reduced rates for employees to become members of the facility and also free memberships to tribal members. Just last fall the Exercise at Work Standard Operation procedure was adopted. This allows full time status employees up to 30 minutes a day of paid time off to engage in physical activity on or off their work site with supervisor approval. The initial results of the participant survey for this program indicated that 84% of the participants identified an overall improvement in their quality of life, 86% of the participants cited an improvement in their wellbeing, and 75% indicated improved morale.

Oneida Nation truly values its employees and all the hard work and dedication shown throughout the departments in the organization and this should not go unrecognized. The Nation's employees should be proud of their work, as without them, our beautiful Nation would not continue to flourish for generations to come.

Yawáko·

Be well and treat one another well.

1 Year Reflection

Shekoli swakwek,

This month marks one year that I have served the Oneida Nation in the capacity of an elected official on the Oneida Business Committee. It has been a true honor and privilege to do so. Throughout this year I have learned so much about our Nation, the organization, and our community. As I have learned what the Nation has done over many decades, I am humbled and appreciative of those that have come before me. Those individuals that have sacrificed, protected, and developed all the things we have here today. It is with these thoughts that I take my oath of office very seriously and as per my oath “I will carry out the duties and responsibilities of the Oneida Business Committee to protect the people, land, resources and treaty rights of the Oneida Nation, and I will abide by the decision of the General Tribal Council.” As an elected official, I’ve had to make tough decisions that I strongly believe are in the best interest of the Nation, but I also know that sometimes those hard decisions will come under scrutiny and criticism. Personally, when I consider a decision on behalf of the Nation, I ensure that I am thinking about how this decision will impact our Nation, community, tribal members, children and our public image, not just for today but 7 generations from now. For the past year, I have sat through many General Tribal Council and Business Committee meetings whereby I feel that we have strayed from our 7 Generations philosophy and our core values. This reminded me of Kayantla?ko’ “The Great Law” where it speaks of a time when peace had been disturbed amongst our people and during this time our culture, ceremonies and peaceful ways of living were almost lost. Our people began to operate in turmoil, chaos and violence amongst one another until the Peacemaker was sent by the Creator to restore kindness, love, and peace to all the villages of our people. During the time of the Peacemaker, our ancestors relied upon our language, culture and ceremonies to bring trust, harmony and peace back in to the hearts of the community. The story of the Great Law reminds me that our Nation’s history; is similarly shared with many other Indian Nation’s throughout Indian Country. The reason we have survived attempts to terminate our people is because we stood strong together in our fight to survive and relied upon our beliefs to get us through those hard times. Now today, it continues to be critically important to the future of our Nation to find solutions on how to resolve our conflicts and find a way to become of one mind because as we all know, by binding each arrow together, we are stronger in our fight. With that in mind, I have been diligently working on developing my ideas around government structure. The Oneida Nation has been in a state of reorganization for a long time. Our government structure should help us to realize our Nation’s vision “A Nation of strong families built on Tsi’ niyukwalihota and a strong economy” by utilizing our organization to drive and execute the Nation’s goals, priorities and strategies. Through establishing clear roles and responsibilities, creating checks and balances, and creating a more focused structure, the Nation can adapt to our ever changing needs and align the similar functioning entities to reduce costs and improve efficiencies. A reformed government structure can also help bring clarity to the roles and responsibilities each of us have within the community. I would like the tribal members to know that throughout this past year I have seriously appreciated the support and kind words that folks share with me from time to time. It encourages me and keeps me going. At the same time I appreciate even the criticism as it helps me stay sharp, focused, learn more, understand more and motivates me to do better and to do more. Throughout the rest of my years as a councilman, I will continue to dedicate myself and stay focused on creating positive, long lasting, far reaching change for our people. Yaw^ko.

“When you sit and you counsel for the welfare of the people, think not of yourself, nor of your family, nor even your generation.”

Brown County bird test positive for West Nile virus

Protect Yourself Against Mosquito Bites

The Brown County Health and Human Services - Public Health Division, City of De Pere and Oneida Health Departments report a dead bird found in Brown County has tested positive for West Nile virus today. This is the first bird that tested positive for West Nile virus in Brown County since surveillance for the mosquito-transmitted virus began May 1.

"The positive bird means that residents of Brown County need to be more vigilant in their personal protective measures to prevent mosquito bites," the health officials have said.

West Nile virus is spread to humans through the bite of an infected mosquito. Mosquitoes acquire the virus by feeding on infected birds.

Brown County residents should be aware of West Nile virus and take some simple steps to protect themselves against mosquito bites. The West Nile virus seems to be here to stay, so the best way to avoid the disease is to reduce exposure to and eliminate breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

The Health Departments recommend the following:

- Limit time spent outside at dawn and dusk, when mosquitoes are most active.

- Apply insect repellent to clothing as well as exposed skin since mosquitoes may bite through clothing.
- Make sure window and door screens are in good repair to prevent mosquito entry.
- Properly dispose of items around your property that hold water, such as tin cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots, or discarded tires.
- Clean roof gutters and downspouts for proper drainage.
- Turn over wheelbarrows, wading pools, boats, and canoes when not in use.
- Change the water in bird baths and pet dishes at least every three days.
- Clean and chlorinate swimming pools, outdoor saunas, and hot tubs; drain water from pool covers.
- Trim tall grass, weeds, and vines since mosquitoes use these areas to rest during hot daylight hours.
- Landscape to prevent water from pooling in low-lying areas.

The majority of people (80%) who are infected with West Nile virus do not get sick. Those who do become ill usually experience mild symptoms such as fever, headache, muscle ache, rash, and fatigue. Less than 1% of people infected with the virus get seriously ill with symptoms that include high fever, muscle weakness, stiff neck, disorientation, mental confusion, tremors, confusion, paralysis, and coma. Older adults and those with compromised immune systems are at greater risk of developing central nervous system illness that can be fatal.

The Wisconsin Department of Health Services has monitored the spread of West Nile virus since 2001 among wild birds, horses, mosquitoes, and people. During 2002, the state documented its first human infections and 52 cases were reported that year. During 2017, 51 cases of West Nile virus infection were reported among Wisconsin residents. West Nile virus infections in humans have been reported from June through October; however, most reported becoming ill with West Nile virus in August and September.

DHS will continue surveillance for West Nile virus until the end of the mosquito season. To report a sick or dead crow, blue jay, or raven, please call the Dead Bird Reporting Hotline at 1-800-433-1610.

Apply Now for Native Agriculture & Food Systems College Scholarships

LONGMONT, Colorado (August 14, 2018) – First Nations Development Institute (First Nations) is now accepting applications for the fifth year of its First Nations Native Agriculture and Food Systems Scholarship Program that aims to encourage more Native American college students to enter the agricultural sector in Native communities.

First Nations will award five scholarships of $1,000 each to Native American college students majoring in agriculture and related fields, including but not limited to agribusiness management, agriscience technologies, agronomy, animal husbandry, aquaponics, environmental studies, fisheries and wildlife, food production and safety, food-related policy and legislation, food science and technology, horticulture, irrigation science, nutrition education, and sustainable agriculture or food systems.

Complete information and a link to the online application can be found at www.firstnations.org/grantmaking/scholarship. All applications must be completed and submitted by 5 p.m. Mountain Daylight Time on Thursday, October 4, 2018.

To be eligible, applicants must:

- Be a full-time undergraduate or graduate student majoring in an agricultural-related field, or be able to demonstrate how their degree program relates to Native food systems.

- Be tribally-affiliated and able to provide documentation.
- Have a Grade Point Average (GPA) of at least 2.75.
- Demonstrate a commitment to helping his or her Native community reclaim local food-system control.

Applicants will be asked to complete an online application and provide other required information, including proof of tribal affiliation, college enrollment verification, unofficial transcripts, a letter of recommendation from a faculty member, and a short essay submission of 250 to 500 words.

First Nations believes that reclaiming control over local food systems is an important step toward ensuring the long-lasting health and economic well-being of Native people and communities. Native food-system control has the potential to increase food production, improve health and nutrition, and eliminate food insecurity in rural and reservation-based communities, while also promoting entrepreneurship and economic development. The purpose of the Native Agriculture and Food Systems Scholarship Program is to encourage more Native American college students to enter these fields so they can better assist their communities with these efforts.

NB3 seeks tech-savvy youth

Cash prizes for winners and opportunity to work with coding specialists.

SANTA ANA PUEBLO, NM ~ The Notah Begay III (NB3) Foundation, with a generous grant from the Comcast Foundation and in partnership with Cultivating Coders, is accepting applications for a national competition for Native youth to design a mobile APP focusing on improving the health and nutrition of Native youth – designed by Native youth. Interested youth may submit their ideas at: <http://www.nb3foundation.org/healthy-kids-healthy-futures-app-contest/>.

This competition is open to individuals or teams of Native youth, ages 13-18, experienced in coding, design, digital media and/or mobile technology. Download the flyer.

Participants must submit a completed application with supporting documents that includes a four-page outline and video of the APP. Contest applications will be accepted from September 1 to October 31, 2018.

Learn more about the contest rules and guidelines at: <http://www.nb3foundation.org/eligibility-criteria/>.

“The NB3 Foundation recognizes that more and more Native youth are using their mobile devices and APPs to track their physical activity, nutrition and even water intake. This competition is an integral step for the Foundation in the direction of connecting youth with technology to build healthier lifestyles,” said NB3 Foundation President and CEO Justin Kii Huenemann.

The intent of the contest is to engage and challenge creative and tech-savvy Native youth from across Indian Country to think creatively, culturally and digitally about their diet, nutrition, exercise and fitness; and turn that knowledge into a solution or problem-solving mobile APP that eventually may be used by the NB3 Foundation.

A panel of NB3 Foundation staff and experts will choose first, second and third place winners. The first-place winner will work with Cultivating Coders, a software company and social enterprise focused on priming the next generation of coders to develop, design and implement their own solutions to address their local challenges, to further develop the APP into a Minimum Viable Product (MVP).

For more information or questions about the application process, please contact Simone Duran, NB3 Foundation Program Assistant, at simone@nb3f.org or 505-867-0775 ext. 102.

Perfecting the lip sync challenge

LIP SYNC CHALLENGE: Police departments from all over have been competing in the viral lip sync challenge, and now, some members of the Oneida Police Department (OPD) accepted the challenge from another police department. With the support of the community, the OPD taped a segment of the video behind the Norbert Hill Center last Tuesday, August 7, 2018. After a few takes, the crowd seemed to be loosened up enough to really get into it. OPD's very own McGruff the Crime Dog made an appearance as well.

A call for community participation was requested prior to filming on the law enforcements facebook page. Some members of the Business Committee were present including Ernest Stevens III, who was coordinating and filming the fun-filled community event along with a variety of assistants.

No word on when the video will be completed so, stay tuned.

Five survival strategies for camping on a budget

By Courtney Jespersen
NerdWallet

Exploring nature and sleeping under the stars can be viewed as an economical vacation. But buying gear and booking campsites or renting an RV can add up.

With some cost-saving strategies, camping can fit a variety of budgets, whether you're planning a car or RV camping trip or backpacking. Try these tips to enjoy the outdoors free of technology, traffic and a big tab.

1. SEARCH FOR FREE CAMPSITES

Don't unplug just yet, before you leave, put your phone to good use by finding a campsite on sites like Campendium.com or FreeCampsites.net.

Many campgrounds charge a nightly fee, but you'll also find free camping options, says Brian Easterling, co-founder and president of Campendium, a campsite review app and website.

Campendium provides information on over 27,000 campsites (free and paid), including national and state parks and RV parks. Listings include user reviews, fees, photos, cell coverage and other details. Some sites have no nightly rate but may require a paid pass to gain access.

Word to the wise: Free campsites don't always include the amenities of paid campgrounds, says Kristin Addis, CEO of Be My Travel Muse, a travel blog. If you choose a free site, locate a place close by where you can clean up; Addis says she's paid for a shower at campgrounds near free sites for less than the campgrounds' overnight fee.

2. CHECK THE WEATHER

Look up the forecast for your destination, including nightly lows, says Addis, who's camped on every continent except Antarctica and has learned the value of an insulated sleeping bag.

"The most important thing is staying warm and comfortable in your tent," Addis says. "So maybe the tent doesn't need to be super fancy or expensive, but I would maybe spend a bit more on your sleeping bag so you're not freezing."

"The sleeping mat is important, too, that it's insulated and keeps you enough off the ground (so) that you're not getting bruised by rocks or roots," she says.

Investing in good gear from the outset, even if it's expensive, could save you money in the long run, rather than buying something that's not quite right and having to replace it later.

3. TRAVEL WITH LESS

Travel light, says Tom Lionvale, a backpacking instructor and adjunct faculty member at College of the Sequoias in California. You don't want too much to carry; 20 pounds not including food and water is a good guideline for backpacking, he says. Even if you're not backpacking, camping with less means purchasing less gear.

For equipment deals, check out online sales. REI.com features REI Garage, where you'll find discounted clothing and gear. Backcountry.com showcases markdowns at its discount division Steep and Cheap.

And don't forget about seasonal sales. For example, REI has an Anniversary Sale each May. You'll also traditionally find lower prices on outdoor gear in October, the tail end of peak camping season. Another cost-saving option: Consider renting gear from an outdoor equipment store, particularly if you're new to the experience.

"Borrow your equipment or rent your equipment because maybe you won't like it after the first trip and then you're stuck with all of that," Lionvale says.

4. FIND A PLACE TO REST

Whether you're camping by car or RV, plan the route you'll take and the stops you'll make to and from your destination.

If you're traveling by RV, Easterling recommends looking for dump stations for waste disposal ahead of time. If you'll need to get some sleep along the journey, search online for free overnight RV parking, such as at rest areas and truck stops.

Be sure to check local rules, since policies on if and how long you can park can vary.

"If you're going on a road trip from San Francisco and you want to get to the Grand Canyon, and you want to do it cheaply, utilize rest areas and utilize free campsites for just your quick over-nighters as you're trying to make those miles with your family," Easterling says.

5. MAKE YOUR OWN RULES

There are many ways to camp, so plan a trip that fits your budget. Skip the things you don't need — like the latest camera if your smartphone will do.

"Anything goes," Lionvale says. "I've seen men and women with World War I army surplus doing a good job and having a good time, and I've seen men and women with ultralight equipment having a miserable time."

Fishing at Oneida Lake is Still Hot, but...

Largemouth Bass fishing is still Catch and Release ONLY!

By Melis Arik
Environmental Health and Safety

You may have heard about some pretty big largemouth bass taking the bait at Oneida Lake. It's true! There's a 25-inch monster swimming around in there, hooked a couple weeks ago by a skillful (and lucky) young angler. And since largemouth fishing at Oneida Lake is CATCH AND

RELEASE ONLY, you might yet get your chance!

Oneida Lake is CATCH AND RELEASE for bass not only to give more people chances to catch the big ones; but also to allow the bass population to stabilize with good natural reproduction. Bass are predators, so they keep the pan fish population in check. Overpopulated pan fish = stunted pan fish. And everyone knows that catching 3-inch bluegills all day is no fun. It won't fill your belly, either!

CATCH AND RELEASE MEANS...

- Catch and release RIGHT AWAY. Hook them, reel them in, and remove the hook carefully. Take a quick pic if you want. If the fish swallows the hook, cut the line – do not attempt to pull it out!

- Wet your hands before handling the fish to keep them slimy – that slime protects them from pathogens!
- Use barbless hooks to minimize impacts on fish. You don't have to buy special hooks for this – just be sure to crimp the barb down with pliers. You can hook a fish just as easily with a barbless hook, and it really makes a difference in how the fish recover.

Remember, bass can live for several years. Be gentle with them so they're around for awhile!

Now, for fish to fill your belly... they are in there. Please know and respect the bag limits and slot sizes to support a sustainable fishery for all to enjoy (rules are posted in the kiosks at the landings).

- ▶ Pan fish (bluegill, sunfish, perch, crappie): Daily harvest of 5, possession limit of 10
- ▶ Walleye: Daily harvest of 1, minimum size 16 inches
- ▶ Catfish/Bullhead: Daily harvest of 1, no minimum size

This walleye was captured at Oneida Lake in October 2017 during the annual electrofishing survey. Maybe it will find its way to your hook!

“Spirit of the Rivers” Monument in place at Manitowoc/Two Rivers border

Special to Kalihwisaks

It was late fall, 2009, when Joseph Metzen, area resident, and R. T. Wallen, sculptor, met and the Spirit of the Rivers monument was conceived. Metzen describes the meeting with Wallen as envisioning a small sculpture to serve as a focal point for a local park. Then, during their lunch meeting the small project blossomed into the Spirit of the Rivers project we now enjoy on the lake front. After lunch, Wallen and Metzen toured the area and selected the current spot, near the Manitowoc/Two Rivers border, where the monument now sits.

This one of a kind public sculpture depicts three American Indian figures, an elder, a woman, and a young man portaging a canoe. The ten foot figures rest on a plinth three feet high, with the twenty foot canoe towering eighteen feet above the ground. The figures appear to emerge from Lake Michigan just off Mariners Trail and the newly restored Forget Me Not Creek.

Artist R. T. Wallen, a Manitowoc native, was visiting the area nine years ago and met with Metzen. During that lunch meeting with Metzen, Wallen sketched the three figures on a napkin. Wallen, a world renowned sculptor, agreed to create a legacy monument for his hometown.

Wallen painstakingly researches his sculptures. This is evident in the amount of detail found in the monument. Wallen who spent many years in Alaska forging life-long relationships with the indigenous tribes has a deep knowledge and great respect for American Indians. His research into tribes found on the Wisconsin lakeshore included the earliest people – the Menominee, Ojibwa, Ottawa, and Potawatomi, along with other Wisconsin tribes, the clothes they wore and the watercraft, such as the birch bark canoe, they designed and built. Wallen and his wife Lynn moved back to Manitowoc, into his childhood home built by his great grandparents while building the sculpture.

Over the course of the past nine years a volunteer board met regularly to raise funds and monitor progress on the project. Fundraising for a public art project during the height of the recession was nothing short of challenging. With dogged determination and constant encouragement from the artist, Wallen, the board persisted and the result is evident on the lakeshore. It speaks well of our community and those who rallied to the cause in erecting a monument that captures a moment in time, celebrating the everyday life of a bygone era. It also gives a nod to our regions' deep maritime history, one that predates the French Canadian immigration.

There were times when the thought of this foolhardy board trying to commemorate, not a battle, not a war memorial, but the simple coming ashore of three people after a day on the big lake, might fall short of their goal. With a persistence that ultimately caught the imagination and financial backing of the community we are witness to the end result, a magnificent monument to our past and those who carved a life and community, long before ours, on this beautiful shore.

2. Permit and Transport Authorization Tags must accompany the permittee or individual(s) authorized to gather under the permit. Transport Authorization Tags must be filled out in ink and attached to boughs for every 200 pounds of boughs. The permittee is encouraged not to harvest more than one-third of each branch in order to continue re-growth. Only remove branches from the lower half of the tree. If essentially all of a branch will be removed, flush cutting the branch close to the tree as required.

3. Collecting is prohibited within 50 feet of the cleared area of a paved or two-lane gravel road and within 50 feet of a designated hiking or ski trail.

4. No live trees may be felled for bough collection.

5. Prior to collecting in active timber sales, you must have written permission from the nearest Ranger District and a bough permit.

6. Use of all-terrain vehicles (ATVs), and two or four wheel drive trucks are not allowed off of Forest Roads, except with written permission from the Ranger District where the gathering is occurring.

It is important to properly harvest boughs from balsam fir trees to ensure the trees survival and it allows the branches to grow into a harvestable bough again in five or six years. Following the guidelines below will help provide a sustainable harvest of boughs each year while supporting the bough market.

Harvest boughs from trees that are greater than seven feet in height.

Harvest boughs from the bottom third of the tree. The wreath industry prefers the flat or semi-round boughs that are typically found at the bottom of balsam trees.

When harvesting, leave a portion of the branch with needles and buds on it to allow it to grow again next year.

Harvested branches should have ends no larger than the diameter of a pencil.

Boughs should be 18 to 30 inches in length.

Shorter boughs are preferred by buyers.

Meet Summer Intern Shakira Stevens

Shekóli, my name is Shakira Stevens and I am the summer intern at Elderly Services. For the fall semester I will be returning to the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, where I am double majoring in Human Development and First Nation Studies.

When asked, "Why I want to work in Elder Services?" My simple answer is; I like working with elders and one of the most influential persons in my life and many others, was my great-grandmother Maria Hinton.

At Elder Services, it is much more than that. I have learned the dynamic and uniqueness of the roles. The expanse ranges from Elder helper to Elder Abuse Supervisor, making it possible for everyone to find their passion. It was also a unique learning experience to hear from our elders, at the Elderly Listening Sessions. To hear from different perspectives really widens the scope and mind.

My hope for the future is to continue to learn to find my strengths and to find my niche. I am thankful to Elderly Services for all that I have learned and everyone's willingness to teach me. I am also very thankful for the culture of positivity I have experienced here; making coming to work everyday something I looked forward to. I am thankful for the opportunity that not just I, but all Summer Interns are given by the Oneida Nation.

Wisconsin university to offer course on treating inmates

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – The University of Wisconsin-Madison School of Medicine and Public Health will offer a new course to teach future doctors how to treat a growing prison population and former convicts once they are released.

The new course will be offered this fall, Wisconsin Public Radio reported. The university is recruiting up to 20 students for the class that will teach students about the trauma people who are incarcerated experience before, during and after serving their sentence.

“We know they have more health care problems than the general population,” said Robert

Striker, an infectious disease specialist with the UW-Madison School of Medicine and Public Health. “We know that diseases that (current or former inmates) have are not necessarily going to stay with them because germs don't respect the boundaries of our legal system.”

Striker, who helps the state Department of Corrections treat conditions like hepatitis C and HIV, is behind the course. He's working with the Nehemiah Center for Urban Leadership Development – a Madison-based nonprofit organization that works to address both social and justice issues affecting African-Americans in the greater Madison community.

Nehemiah is also collaborating with medical school educators, the Department of Corrections and former prisoners to try and address how both racial disparities and the re-entry of prisoners into society affects health care practices.

“We put our heads together and realized that health care providers in the criminal justice system need to have a clear understanding of how the system works, where the good things are and where the challenges are so that they can deliver care in a more culturally responsive way,” said Karen Reece, director of research and program evaluation at Nehemiah.

The course will focus on the importance of delivering quality care to current and former inmates. Tours of jails and prisons are also being planned. Students will be able to shadow medical professionals working in the correctional system.

University of Wisconsin-La Crosse pushes for reusable straws

LA CROSSE, WI (AP) – The University of Wisconsin-La Crosse is moving toward replacing plastic straws with reusable straws at dining locations on campus.

The university announced the change to reusable straws in a letter to faculty and staff earlier this month, Wisconsin Public Radio reported.

The idea to push for reusable straws came from the new leaders of the university's Student Association, said University Centers Director Larry Ringgenberg.

The university will likely promote the movement by handing out free reusable straws this fall, Ringgenberg said. Officials plan to eventually make the straws available for purchase, he said.

Ringgenberg said there's been some pushback to the idea, with concerns over how the change will affect those with disabilities who need straws.

While limiting the use of plastic straws is a positive thing for the environment, they shouldn't be banned completely because some people with disabilities rely on them, said Michaela Gaffke from Aptiv, a nonprofit that provides services to people with mental and physical disabilities.

“Other (straw) materials hold a choking hazard, injury risk, and are not safe for high temperatures,” she said. “Also these materials are not position-able like the plastic straws.”

Plastic straws will be still available upon requests, Ringgenberg said.

Ringgenberg said there are also questions about if the change is really needed since most of the university's garbage is used at a local waste-to-energy plant. Officials still hope to reduce the amount of single-use plastic on campus, he said.

Students will be able to decide if they wish to vote on a referendum that completely bans straws from campus, Ringgenberg said.

“When the students actually vote on it, I think that will be a really interesting reaction,” he said. “We'll find out what the college students of today really feel and if they think it's a fad or if they think it's a really good idea to do something with this.”

Students may vote on the referendum as early as September.

17 people, two pawn shops sentenced in eagle trafficking case

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) ~ Nineteen defendants were sentenced following an undercover investigation into the illegal trafficking of body parts from eagles and other protected birds, federal authorities in South Dakota said Thursday.

U.S. Attorney Ron Parsons' office said in a statement that 17 people from several states and two South Dakota pawn shops were sentenced in federal court for various violations under the Lacey Act, the Migratory Bird Treaty Act and the Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act. The investigation dubbed Project Dakota Flyer offered a rare view into the black market for eagle carcasses, feathers and other parts, and handicrafts.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office said Project Dakota Flyer spurred 31 indictments, with 12 defendants' cases still pending. The sentences announced Thursday range from prison time to fines for the defendants that include nine men and five women from South Dakota, a man from North Dakota, a man from Iowa, a man from Idaho and the two pawn shops in South Dakota.

"This investigation has demonstrated the breadth of the illegal black market for eagle and other migratory bird parts,"

Parsons said. "It is our goal to completely eliminate the unauthorized killing and selling of bald eagles, golden eagles and other protected species."

Parsons' office said the operation used undercover techniques to buy protected bird parts from 51 suspects over 19 months. Authorities said the purchases happened over the internet and in Iowa, Montana, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming.

Edward Grace, acting assistant director of the Office of Law Enforcement for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said in the statement that agents and forensic scientists found more than 35 bird species, spanning every continent but Antarctica, had been trafficked.

"This operation, which began in America's heartland, illustrates how wildlife trafficking is a global crisis," Grace said.

Not only are eagles the national symbol of the United States, they're widely considered sacred by Native Americans. Federal law limits possession of eagle feathers and other parts to enrolled members of federally recognized tribes who use them in religious practices. Hunting them generally remains illegal.

"Importantly, nothing in this investigation was done to infringe upon traditional Native American use of eagle parts for cultural or spiritual purposes," Parsons said.

Sculpture planned for Native American cemetery to be moved MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) ~ A new sculpture planned for a Native American burial site in western Michigan is being relocated after a tribe raised concerns it would disturb sacred ground.

Construction was already underway to place the 16-foot (4.9-meter) granite sculpture, "All My Relations," at the entrance of the Old Indian Cemetery in Muskegon.

Members of the Grand River Bands of Ottawa Indians recently advocated for a different location for the sculpture, which was crafted by Anishinaabe artist Jason Quigno.

"That cemetery in downtown Muskegon, to the Ottawa people is a sacred place," said Joseph Genia, the cemetery's caretaker for more than 30 years. "They've always considered it sacred grounds."

Placing a statue in the cemetery would ruin its integrity, he said.

The city, the Community Foundation for Muskegon County and other partners had received approval from the Little River Band of Ottawa Indians on the sculpture's location, said City Manager Frank Peterson.

"It was our understanding that everyone had been notified and everybody was on board, and it was a welcomed investment," Peterson said.

Muskegon officials had already laid cement when the tribal leaders came forward with complaints. City planners immediately canceled the placement of the sculpture after receiving pushback.

City officials will remove the cement and restore the cemetery's soil, according to Genia.

The contemporary sculpture with seven connected circles on each side of an obelisk wasn't meant to cause conflict, Quigno said.

The circles "represent the seven grandfather teachings. There's love, respect, honesty, bravery, truth, humility and wisdom," he said. "The sculpture was supposed to be about honoring not only our ancestors - it was to honor - us Anishinaabe in this time and into the future."

The sculpture's new site is expected to be announced soon.

Peterson preps young Thunderhawks squad for 2018 season

With the Oneida Nation Thunderhawks football team set to kick off their 2018 season on Friday, Aug. 17, on the road against Gibraltar, eighth-year Head Coach Bryan Peterson will be looking to get the most out of his squad that contains no seniors. “We lost a good amount of guys to graduation last year,” Peterson said. “Unfortunately we lost virtually our entire offensive and defensive lines so we’re teaching kids as we go. We’re fortunate to have our All-Conference center Cruzito Montoya back but we’re also looking to fill key skill positions as well. So there’s been a lot of teaching going on in camp this year.”

With the loss of All-State players Seth Charles and Damiano House to graduation, this is the perfect opportunity for the younger group of players to step up and shine. “We have a great battle going right now for the starting quarterback position between Kennedy Kaquatosh and Johnny Doxtator,” Peterson said. “They’re looking like juniors but they’re doing all right. They need some fine tuning yet but we’re definitely getting them there. Whichever of the two takes the reins as our signal caller means we’ll move the other outside as our number one receiver.”

Even though all of the players currently on the roster are underclassmen, they are not lacking game experience. “Most of our juniors coming back this year got playing time last year,” Peterson said. “And running back Evan Danforth and defensive back/receiver Peyton Ponfil have actually started games for us. Bruce Funmaker played quite a bit at defensive back last year and has had a really good camp so far. But I think Cruz (Montoya) is going to be our best player because even as a sophomore last year he was one our top three. I think Kennedy has the ability to be an All-State type of player for us, so we just need to get him to buckle down and accept that role. So those are the guys I really think are going to step up this year.”

With summer winding down, Peterson is hoping to get more players added to the roster once the academic year at the Oneida Nation High School (ONHS) begins. “We only have 11 players on the roster at the moment,” Peterson said. “A lot of our guys have summer jobs so that’s a contributor as to why our numbers are low but we always get reinforcements once the school year starts.”

It’s been a numbers game across the board in the Marinette, Oconto, Northern Lakes, and Packerland (MONLPC)

8-Man Conference. Bowler High School appears to have become a numbers casualty and will not field a team this year due to low player turnout. But that, Peterson said, may be a blessing in disguise for the young Thunderhawks squad. “We play week one on the road against Gibraltar and we were scheduled to play Bowler in week two,” Peterson said. “So now with them pulling out we’ll have a week two bye on our schedule before we get our reinforcements in. We’re trying to push to get into the playoffs for the first time this year because we’ve never had an actual, true playoff.”

This past offseason Peterson brought in a familiar face to help coach the young crop of new players. “We’ve brought back Jon Bradley as our defensive coordinator who I’ve worked with for a number of years,” Peterson said. “So our defense will have a unique look to it that most people haven’t gotten a look at. This is going to be a lot of fun to see how this develops. Hopefully Cruz, Lahsa Hill, and Ian Stevens will have dominant defensive seasons. We’ll have Danforth and Ponfil at the corners, and of course Kaquatosh at linebacker, and we have a new player named Darian Wheelock who I also think is going to be an outstanding linebacker.

“If there are any players out there waiting for school to start to come out and play let’s try and get them out there as soon as we can,” Peterson said. “We would love to have them ready to go for our week three game against Wausaukee because that’s a big school and a big game.”

The T-Hawks open their regular season on the road against Gibraltar on Aug. 17 before their week two bye. They will then go on the road again to Wausaukee on Thursday, Aug. 30, before returning to Oneida for their home opener on Sept. 7 when they will square off against Sevastopol.

When I was growing up, on Second Ridge, there was no deer, or bear, or turkeys. The main reason for the absence of game was because every farmer fenced the pastures to the creeks on their farms. This accommodated the livestock so that they could have access to all the fresh water they wanted. The farmers need not, then, pump fresh water or bail it from a convenient spring.

manner also ate all the young berry plants along with the grasses that naturally grew in the bottom lands. The creek bottoms became clear of any brush or cover which would discourage any of the wild animals from occupying territory on the Oneida Reservation.

During the '40s, I saw no turkeys and few geese or ducks. There were a few flocks of Hungarian partridge and Bobwhites, though. We now have an abundance of trees and much underbrush and the animals are now taking advantage of the cover. That also allows for good hunting. The blackberries are coming back, as well as blackcaps (raspberries) but the blueberries are still not evident.

Sucker fishing, in the spring, when the ice went out on Duck Creek, was an event in this community. The fish were caught easily with nets and spears—by the tubfull. They were good to eat fried, but many of the families also enjoyed Sucker Head Soup. Folks who were not fishing often bought suckers for five or ten cents apiece from those who were. Suckers could also be smoked and canned. The dam at Pamperin Park limited the access to the sucker catch. Previous to the existence of the dam, suckers migrated nearly to the town of Freedom. Other small pan fish were caught in Duck Creek, too. These included perch, blue gills, bullheads and pickerel. With the improvement of the water quality on the Reservation, these species, and trout may return.

Top: Farming was done along the Duck Creek to allow for access to water for crops which led to a deterioration of waterways for fish and fowl. Improvements to the watershed in Oneida has meant a return of fish and wild plant life to the reservation. Bottom: Men fish with a net in Duck Creek in Pamperin Park during the spring sucker run.

Four Spiritual Medicines

Written by Culture Awareness Team

Some spiritual medicines were borrowed from other tribes/regions and adapted to modern day Oneida traditions. You may hear of Oneida community members using these spiritual medicines for mental health purposes:

Cedar - May be used after a death for protection. Traditionally Cedar water was used to wash down children after a funeral to protect them from spirits.

Sweet grass - May be used to purify, calm, and heal your spirit.

Tobacco - May be used for traditional ceremonies, special prayers, and personal communications to the Creator.

Sage - May be used to remove negative energies surrounding a person and cleanse their spirit.

Wisconsin Bat Festival August 24-25 in Ashland

RHINELANDER, Wis. ~ The Wisconsin Bat Festival will “land” at the Northern Great Lakes Visitor Center on the last weekend in August with free, family-friendly activities. The festival will be held on Saturday, August 25th from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Visitor Center with free exhibits, educational displays, live bat programs, and hands-on activities. Biologists will hold a science night demonstration on Friday, August 24th from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Visitor Center. Visitors will learn how bat experts use technology to study bats and are advised to bring a headlamp and mosquito repellent. Brian Heeringa, Forest Service Wildlife Biologist says, “Hosting the Wisconsin Bat Festival at the Northern Great Lakes Visitor Center with the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources is a great fit. Concern about the Wisconsin bat population has risen since white-nose syndrome appeared here in 2014 and residents are asking for more information. We all work together for bat conservation and this is a great opportunity to share what we know.” The Northern Great Lakes Visitor Center is located at 29270 County Highway G, Ashland. The event is presented by the Visitor Center, the U.S. Forest Service, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and Bayfield County Tourism.
