The summer of 2019 brings with it a celebration of a quarter-century of prosperity for the Oneida Nation fueled in large part by the successes of the Oneida Casino. Throughout the month of July, the Oneida Casino will be hosting its 25th Anniversary Celebration to commemorate the success Indian Gaming has had on the Oneida Nation and surrounding communities.

“We signed our compact with the State of Wisconsin in 1991 and at that time we built a facility attached to the Irene Moore Activity Center (IMAC),” Oneida Nation Gaming General Manager Louise Cornelius said. “We immediately began planning for this Main Casino and opened in 1994, and here we are 25 years later so this is a very exciting time for us. My philosophies and beliefs on how to be successful are providing excellent customer service, having good communication, and having good compliance with all the rules and regulations. I’m certain we’ll have continued success.”

The Native American Drug and Gang Initiative (NADGI), the Brown County Drug Task Force, and other State of Wisconsin law enforcement agencies have conducted a wide-sweeping operation resulting in the arrests of more than two dozen people in the Green Bay metro area. Those arrested are suspected of being involved in a large-scale drug ring with possible Mexican cartel ties.

According to Oneida Nation Chief of Police Eric Boulanger the investigation remains ongoing, therefore more information will be released at a later date. "There were multiple search warrants executed in the area and NADGI, in collaboration with other agencies, conducted one of them here in Oneida," Boulanger said. "During the execution of that search warrant NADGI was able to seize drug paraphernalia and weapons. This is a fluid situation, so if there are more ties to the reservation we'll be involved with it. We were brought on because one of the players was in our area, so we were asked to assist."

The suspected leader of the drug ring, Ruben Ortiz, 36, got his 17-year-old son Franklin Ortiz, his 58-year-old mother Nancy Skenandore, and 29-year-old sister Stephanie Ortiz involved in the conspiracy, prosecutors alleged during court appearances June 18. Stephanie Ortiz is a co-founder of Black Lives United in Green Bay and a member of End Domestic Abuse Wisconsin.

Others arrested in the operation and making court appearances:

- Alejandro Lopez, 37, was found with a kilo of cocaine and several firearms when arrested.

- Jonathon Patton, 37, owner of Cover 2 Sports Bar and Lounge on Green Bay's near east side. Prosecutors say Patton used the bar for money laundering purposes related to the case. Patton is the brother of former Green Bay Packers superstar Charles Woodson.
- Cedric Cohen, 41, described as "one of the primary right-hand people to Ruben Ortiz" by prosecutors. Cohen allegedly purchased up to 2 pounds of marijuana per month from Ortiz. When arrested large amounts of cocaine was found in his residence.
- Darin Walls, 36, accused of selling cocaine, marijuana, and heroin.
- Raeden Metoxen, 20, Laura Gonzalez, 22, Melanie Abundiz, 23, Zsotavia Vales, 22, Ingrid Sanchez, 32, Benjamin Thurber, 24, Jovan Rush, 21, Maximillano Garcia, 21, and Arreon Purnell, 21, also made initial appearances in Brown County Court related to the ongoing investigation.

More information is expected to be released in the coming weeks which will provide an in-depth outline regarding the charges filed against those involved, the scope of the drug operation, and possibly what those potential Mexican cartel links may be. The Kalihwisaks will continue to monitor the situation and provide updates as information becomes available.

Thornberry Creek LPGA Classic Confirms Three Sponsor Invitations

Native American Gabby Lemieux to Compete with the World's Best

ONEIDA, WISCONSIN, June 12, 2019 – Native American Gabby Lemieux, former U.S. Women's Amateur champion Sophia Schubert and 14-year-old sensation Alexa Pano complete sponsor invitations for the third edition of the Thornberry Creek LPGA Classic from July 4 – 7, 2019.

Gabby Lemieux, a member of the Shoshone-Paiute tribe, returns to Thornberry Creek at Oneida, the official golf course of the Green Bay Packers, just one year from her professional debut. Lemieux, who graduated from Texas Tech in 2018, has played the majority of the season on the LPGA Symetra Tour and is the only Native American in the 144-player field.

Joining her in field competing for a $2 million purse, which includes past champions, Sei Young Kim and Katherine Kirk as well as Rolex Ranking No. 3 Sung Hyun Park and Hall of Famer, Inbee Park is Sophia Schubert and Alexa Pano.

Schubert, a 23-year-old from Tennessee, shot to prominence in 2017 with victory in the U.S. Women's Amateur before turning professional and making her LPGA debut last summer. Schubert currently competes on the LPGA Symetra Tour but has competed in three of the five LPGA majors.

Completing the trio of invitations is 14-year-old amateur star, Alexa Pano, who despite her age, already boasts a notable golfing CV including no less than 67 national titles and most recently, an appearance in the U.S. Women's Open. Pano, who made her professional debut aged 11 was recognized as the seven-year-old girl from the well-known golfing documentary 'The Short Game', but is now more often compared to a young Lexi Thompson. Similarly, to Lemieux, Pano also participated in the 2018 Thornberry Creek LPGA Classic.

Commenting on her return, Gabby Lemieux, said, "I'm so grateful to Oneida for the invite to play at Thornberry Creek again this year and I'm determined to learn from my experience last season and come back stronger. As the only Native American in the field I definitely felt the support of the tribe out on the course and I can't wait to be back."

Alexa Pano added, "I can't wait to get back to Thornberry Creek and hopefully make a few more birdies this year. The scoring last year was unbelievable and it is still a real learning curve for me to see how the professionals go about their business on the LPGA. I'm thankful to all of the tournament organizers for the opportunity to compete against some of the best players in the world and I hope to realize my dream one day of competing against them full-time."

Oneida Golf Enterprise Agent Chad Fuss said, "We are thrilled to offer invitations to these three rising stars and provide them with a platform to showcase their talent to the world. They all have extremely bright futures and we are looking forward to giving the fans a chance to cheer on some young talent. Gabby is the only Native American tribe member with LPGA Symetra Tour status at the moment but I'm sure she will help to inspire the next generation of golfers to get to this level."

Some of the early community concerns regarding the Oneida Nation's burgeoning gaming operations have long since subsided, but they have not been forgotten. "Much of the early opposition centered around the fact that gambling was taking place," Cornelius said. "Gambling can be a form of addiction, so shortly after we began this operation the State of Wisconsin, as well as the tribes, developed Gamblers Anonymous and we now make an annual contribution to that cause."

When the Main Casino opened its doors to the public in July 1994 the Gaming Division employed 2,155 workers. Of those, 40 percent were enrolled Oneida Nation citizens. Today more than 50 percent of Gaming Division employees are Oneida Nation citizens, and the Oneida Nation remains one of the top three employers in all of Northeast Wisconsin.

To stay on top of the gaming industry, the casino has undergone a number of changes in its 25-year history. Some of these upgrades include the addition of electronic table games, as well as a complete renovation of the food court area. The smoke-free mall area of the casino now boasts slot machines for customer use, and the addition of Lombardi's Legendary Sports Bar & Grill has proven to be highly popular. The minimum age for entrance into the casino was raised from 18 to 21 when alcohol began being served.

Other changes involved moving the Poker Room from the Mason Street Casino over to the Main Casino, which included renovations to the high stakes slot area and the Executive Lounge. Perhaps the most noticeable changes to the gaming floor are the increased selections of table games. In 1994 the only table games option was Blackjack. Today, in addition to Blackjack, the Oneida Casino offers Let It Ride, Three Card Poker, Four Card Poker, Royal Match 21, Traditional Roulette, Rapid Roulette, Mini Baccarat, Craps, and Ultimate Texas Hold'Em.

To celebrate 25 years of successful gaming, the Oneida Casino will be hosting numerous events during the month of July. "It's exciting to be able to celebrate a large milestone like this," Cornelius said in recent press statement. "We've been Northeast Wisconsin's #1 gaming destination for the past 25 years, and we'd like to celebrate this achievement with our entire community as a way of thanking them for our continued success."

Two of the big promotions planned include a $25,000 Cash & Free Play Giveaway on Friday, July 12, and a $125,000 Free Play Giveaway on Thursday-Sunday, July 25-28. Table Games players who have qualifying hands from July 8-23 will be eligible for entries for a cash drawing on July 23 where 10 winners will receive $500 cash. Oneida Bingo will also be having various specials throughout the month. Poker will be hosting two No-Limit Texas Hold 'Em Tournaments on Thursday, July 25, at noon and 6 p.m.

Free lounge entertainment will take place throughout the month at the Main Casino, and some of country music's most legendary acts like the Grits & Glamour Tour with Pam Tillis and Lorrie Morgan, Hank Williams, Jr., and Sara Evans will be performing in the Three Clans Ballroom. For more information about events taking place for Oneida Casino's 25th Anniversary, visit www.OneidaCasino.net or check out www.facebook.com/OneidaCasino.

The next 25 years of Oneida gaming appears to be just as promising as the previous, with new and innovative technology constantly changing the way casinos operate. For instance, all of Oneida's slot machines were coin operated for many years. In recent years those machines have been replaced and now operate as a Ticket In, Ticket Out (TITO) system. The TITO system has proven to be a convenient upgrade for both casinos and players. Casino Slot Departments no longer need to constantly fill coin hoppers, and all players need to carry around is a slip of paper with their credit totals printed on it instead of big cups filled with coins.

"The future of Oneida gaming is technology," Cornelius said. "Technology is always evolving and has changed dramatically for our guests and for us. The new generation of millennials that are coming up in the ranks love that competitiveness with technology so I'm certain that is how we will continue to grow."

The next 25 years of gaming appears to be just as promising as the previous. With the Oneida Nation now having been long recognized as a leader in tribal gaming, many of the positive impacts the casinos have had on the Nation can be easily recognized. "Some of the positive things that come from the casinos are, of course, the revenue to sustain the Oneida Tribe," Cornelius said. "Education, housing, jobs, and health services are now much easier to come by for the Oneida people as we continue to help sustain those programs."

Alaska climate change forcing some villages to relocate

QUINHAGAK, Alaska (AP) – Accelerating erosion is forcing villages in western Alaska to begin making plans to move, officials said.

Erosion caused by climate change threatens village infrastructure and could force the relocation of communities such as Quinhagak, Alaska's Energy Desk reported Monday.

A 2012 state report listed Quinhagak's sewer lagoon and multipurpose building as top priorities for replacement or repair because of erosion and thawing permafrost.

Erosion now threatens Quinhagak's airstrip, water treatment plant and water and sewer system, officials said.

Quinhagak's sewer lagoon and the building holding the laundromat and health clinic have experienced the worst impacts, creating a public health problem, said tribal administrator Ferdinand Cleveland.

The village installed thermosiphons, systems designed to keep the ground from thawing, but they are not working because the ground is warming too fast, Ferdinand said.

"See the outside part of the building; the concrete is sinking, and the drywall is cracking," he said.

He does not know how they would close up the lagoon if erosion causes waste to leak into the Kuskokwim Bay, an important food source.

Quinhagak has applied for a Bureau of Indian Affairs grant to help with moving and rebuilding the lagoon, which could cost $6 million. A new health clinic could cost $2.5 million.

Newtok, another coastal community north of Quinhagak, is preparing for a move that could cost more than $100 million.

The time to look toward Quinhagak's relocation has arrived, officials said.

"I think it's time to start preparing," said Warren Jones, president of the village corporation, Qanirtuuq Inc. "It's coming, there's no way about it."

Danforth earns milestone at his 10th 10k Bellin Run

For the last ten years Hugh Danforth has been participating in the 10k Bellin Run. This year 2019, he was awarded a First place medal for his age group, 85 & over male.

"I dedicated this run to my daughter

Michelle for her positive attitude and courage," said Danforth.

Hugh was diagnosed with type 2 diabetes in 1999. "When I found out I had sugar diabetes, was the reason I became more health conscious with exercise and diet. But, he says in the last couple years, "I came to a conclusion that sugar diabetes was a blessing in disguise." Since then, leading a healthy lifestyle, contributed to his A1C levels going down as well as his overall weight – not to mention a first place medal for his age group.

With over 16,000 participants in this year's Bellin Run, Danforth donned bib #15,101 and his overall Place was 7398 with a time of 1:47:31. In a letter that he received with his medal, Randy VanStraten, Executive Race Director, said "Runners like you continue to make it the marquee running event in the state, as well as one of the top ten 10K races across the country."

So for those of you who are second guessing yourself that participation is out of reach in any type of run/walk event, don't. Danforth is living proof that you can achieve anything you put your mind to. He says he is "looking forward to next year and years after 2020."

'The Buffalo Hunt' seeks to show tribe in a new light

By Russell Contreras
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) ~ "The Buffalo Hunt," a new documentary on the homeland of the Oglala Lakota, attempts to shun clichés around the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota involving poverty and addiction and instead focus on traditions around the Native American tribe.

Directed by Philip Di Fiore, the film lets the Lakota Sioux people of today speak without narration as they work to save customs passed down by the elders through the buffalo hunt — a sacred act which extends to all aspects of life. There, in the hunt, elders share stories on how previous generations used the animal's gifts and prepared hunters for the world before them. Young members watch and participate.

The year-long project on Pine Ridge began after producer Phillip O'Leary took part in the 2016 protests at Standing Rock over the proposed Dakota Access Pipeline over concerns the local drinking water would be polluted. O'Leary originally wanted to dive into a documentary around the Standing Rock protests until he met Pine Ridge members, Di Fiore said. The Lakota Sioux men, like members of other Native American tribes from New Mexico to Oklahoma, had come to Standing Rock in solitary.

"Phillip was captivated by their stories so the focus of the project changed," Di Fiore said.

But would it fall victim of other stereotypical portrayals?

Pine Ridge has been the subject of a number of documentaries that have centered on the reservation's extreme poverty, chronic alcoholism or drug addiction. Those films, like the 2008 "The Battle for Whiteclay" and the 2014 "Sober Indian Dangerous Indian," regularly juxtapose the breathtaking landscape of the Great Plains with human suffering in a place where unemployment hovers around 85 percent.

"As a white guy from New York coming into their world, I didn't want to fall into these traps," said Di Fiore, a Brooklyn-based director best known for shooting music videos. "So we were very careful not to insert a preachy message or stamp our views on anything. We just let the story unfold."

Eventually, Di Fiore and his crew turned their attention to traditional buffalo hunts where the Oglala Lakota worked on their terms. Di Fiore conducted no interviews. He didn't seek outside experts to explain anything.

Instead, he filmed detailed shots of hunters skinning a buffalo then delivering meat to elders for stew. That became the window to larger stories about community across the sprawling 3,500 square-mile (9,064 square-kilometer) reservation.

Some shots go longer than expected. An elder's nearly five-minute speech is shown in its entirety.

After one hunt, Di Fiore focuses on a one woman, who, at 75 years old, had just finished getting her college degree. She'd been sent to a boarding school as a child and forgotten how to speak her traditional language. A young member heard her story after delivering buffalo ground meat to her.

Those in hunts tackled stereotypes by just being themselves, Di Fiore said. After taking part in a ceremony following a hunt in one scene, male members hear a story about how the buffalo will enter the spirit world. The men in the ceremony wear hoodies and baseball caps.

"We wanted to do our best to be respectful and take you into their world," Di Fiore said.

"The Buffalo Hunt" already has won a number of awards, including best feature documentary honors at the Prague Film Awards and Canada International Film Festival.

The film is set to be released on Amazon Prime on June 21.

New group forms to fight for UW funding

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ A new group is forming to push for ending a University of Wisconsin System tuition freeze and more state funding for UW-Madison.

Badgers United launched Monday. The board of directors includes former Major League Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig, a UW-Madison alumnus. John and Tashia Morgridge, alumni who have donated millions of dollars to the campus, also sit on the board.

Republican lawmakers have kept tuition rates for in-state students frozen since 2013. The GOP-controlled Joint Finance Committee in May approved a proposal in Democratic Gov. Tony Evers' budget that extends the freeze for another two years.

Evers' budget called for $127 million in additional state aid for the system but the committee cut that back to $58 million. System President Ray Cross called the reduction a "kick in the shins."

Summer Food Program Offers Free Nutritious Meals throughout Summer Break

GREEN BAY, WI – Stressing the importance of offering nutritious meals to children during the summer months, the Green Bay Area Public School District announces the sponsorship of the Summer Food Service Program.

The Summer Food Service Program (SFSP), which is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and is administered by the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction, provides nutritious meals to children during the summer, when free and reduced-price school meals are typically unavailable. Free meals will be made available to children 18 years of age and under. Persons over 18 years of age who are determined by a state or local public educational agency to be mentally or physically disabled and who also participate in a public or private non-profit school program during the regular school year may receive free meals as well.

The following locations will be serving free meals this summer (refer to site list for locations and times below). Meals are free to students 1 – 18 years old and adult meals are $3.00. Meals are provided to eligible children regardless of race, color, national origin, age, gender or disability and there will be no discrimination in the course of meal service.

“This program fills a void created when school lunches are not available,” said Lynette Zalec, Director of Food Services. “Helping parents meet the nutritional needs of their children is the strength of this program.”

The daily food service schedule for each park day beginning June 12 through August 16 (no July 4 or August 6 meals), Monday through Friday, is as follows:

Lawmakers seek change in teacher loan program

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – A bipartisan group of Wisconsin lawmakers is working to expand the eligibility for a forgivable loan program for minority trainee teachers after changes made four years ago led to a drop in loans awarded.

The state's Minority Teacher Loan Program offers loans to African American, Latino, American Indian and some Southeast Asian populations to study teaching at a Wisconsin college.

But the program has been seeing dips in enrollment in recent years following changes that make it more difficult for people to qualify, the Wisconsin State Journal reported.

In the three school years prior to the eligibility changes taking effect, the program awarded 212 loans. Only 11 loans were awarded in the three school years after the changes, including just one in 2017-18.

The 2015 changes required recipients to work at a public or private school only in Milwaukee, teach in a high-demand field and receive a rating of proficient or distinguished in a teacher evaluation. If the requirements are met, 25% of the interest and principal on loans is forgiven per year.

Before the changes, recipients could pursue any teaching discipline and work at a Wisconsin school with a minority student population of 29% or more — which is about 60 school districts, according to the Legislative Fiscal Bureau.

Now, a bipartisan bill would allow loan recipients to get their loans forgiven if work in schools composed of 40% or more students of color, which is the case in about 25 school districts, or a tribal school, while still working in a high-demand field such as special education, math or bilingual teaching.

"I think sometimes we lose sight that there are people of color outside of Milwaukee and Madison," said state Rep. Jason Fields, D-Milwaukee. "We do a disservice, to be honest, if we don't say, 'Hey listen, inclusion and diversity is good for everyone of us.' Let's do this outside of just Milwaukee."

Connie Hutchison is the executive secretary of the Higher Educational Aids Board, which runs the loan program. She said she thinks the limitation on where recipients could teach caused interest in the program to decline.

"If you narrow it to just one specific place, people aren't even sure they're going to get a job in Milwaukee," Hutchison said. "If they're taking out a loan, and their only option is one school district, that's not really much of an incentive for people to take out a loan ... they're depending on to be forgiven."

The Assembly bill received unanimous support in the Colleges and Universities Committee. It is scheduled for a full Assembly vote on Tuesday.

Shekoli!

The Oneida Nation has many citizens who have celebrated educational milestones over the last month with graduations from Head Start through college. Congratulations to you!

Now that summer is underway, it's a great time to spend enjoying the weather while supporting events in the community. Oneida's 47th Annual Pow Wow and the third year of the LPGA Thornberry Classic at Oneida are right around the corner.

Whether a seasoned golfer, or you just want to get out for the day, the third annual LPGA Thornberry Classic at Oneida will be a fun event for all to attend—Thursday, July 4 through Sunday, July 7; 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily!

Two new highlights for this year's event is the all access for ticket holders to the Clubhouse and an Oneida Elder viewing area. Oneida elders, 55 and older, will have access to a climate-controlled viewing area inside the Thornberry Creek Clubhouse. This viewing area is being offered for our Oneida elders to provide comfortable seating arrangements, complimentary snacks and soft drinks.

Another perk for our elders is the event will be broadcast for them on high definition televisions.

Remember that Oneida Nation tribal members receive complimentary grounds admission for the event with a valid Oneida tribal member ID. Shuttles are also being provided for transport from parking lots at NWTC and the Turtle School to the tournament and back. NWTC shuttles are running July 2 and July 3rd, 6:30 a.m. until 7:30 p.m. and shuttles from Turtle school are available July 4 through July 7; 6:30 a.m. until 8:30 p.m.

The concession stands at the LPGA will be headed up by youth community groups. A portion of the proceeds from concessions sales will go toward the Oneida Youth Leadership Institute which is a Section 7871 charitable organization and groups who volunteer will have access to the money raised based on the hours worked. Supporting this event through work, is just one way our youth are helping the community and stepping up to lead.

One of the platforms I spoke about when I ran for office was uplifting and supporting our youth.

That being said, at the end of this month, four Oneida youth along with myself, Vice Chairman Stevens, and Councilman Jordan will be attending the 2019 NCAI Mid-Year Conference where the youth will represent the Oneida Nation at the Youth Commission.

Enrolled Oneidas entering the 11th or 12th grade in the fall were invited to apply and required to submit a statement of interest and two letters of recommendation to be considered. I'm proud to say, four Oneida youth, Eleciah Danforth, Logan Hill, Joseph Powless, and Kaylee Schuyler have been selected to attend. These students will have the opportunity to acquire knowledge about Tribal government, Native American legislative and governmental affairs, and political science. They will also have a chance to connect with youth from across Indian Country and give input to tribal leaders outside our Nation.

As part of the application process, the youth agreed to submit a letter to the Kalihwisaks talking about their experience and what they have learned at NCAI's Youth Commission so that is something you can look forward to reading in the future--make sure to watch for their letters in an issue this fall.

Shekoli,

Semi-Annual General Tribal Council Meeting

Is scheduled for Thursday, July 11, 2019 at 6:00 p.m. at the Radisson Hotel and Conference Center. You should be receiving your packet in the mail shortly. Please read the information being presented and bring your packet with you to the meeting.

One item of importance in this packet is amendments to the Oneida Election Law that are being presented for your consideration. These amendments, if adopted, will govern the General Election being held in July of next year.

Unfortunately, I will not be in attendance as this meeting as I have, an all-day Tribal Task Force Meeting being held in Bad River, Wisconsin.

Please mark your calendars and remember this is a Thursday night meeting.

Homelessness

During the past six months a team of professionals and community members have been meeting to discuss the opening of a warming shelter on the Oneida Reservation. Our hope is to have a place where individuals may come in from the raw elements of the weather in our area to gather and communicate with other members of their community. This is still ongoing and with continued help from others in the community, this may be a reality come October. Initial hours for this place are slated to be from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. with the possibility of having a light snack during the noon hour.

LPGA

The 3rd Annual Ladies Professional Golf Association Classic at Thornberry Creek is being held in Oneida July 2-7, 2019. The last two champions of this classic will return, one to try and win back-to-back championships and the other to try and unseat her and take two out of the three contests.

David Jordan
Councilman

Graduation

Earlier this month I had to opportunity to attend several graduations which were held in the local area. These included Oneida Headstart/Early Headstart, the 8th grade graduation held at the Turtle School for our elementary students as well as the Oneida Nation High School graduation held at the Radisson. All of these students are to be commended for reaching a milestone, as well as the parents of these students for their caring attitude in keeping them in school. It is my hope the high school students who graduated will continue their education, wherever it may be, and continue to be successful in their endeavors.

National Congress of American Indians (NCAI)

During the week of June 23-27, I will be traveling to Sparks, Nevada with four young people from Oneida to participate in meetings regarding the continued efforts of our national leaders to further legislation regarding Indian Country. These four individuals have shown an interest in cultural activities as well as furthering their education in the role our government plays in attaining future federal funding and other initiatives for our next generation.

Legislative Operating Committee (LOC)

As Chairman of the LOC I would like to give you an update of the legislation the LOC is working on. As the LOC continues working on creating, amending and submitting laws of the Nation for final submission to either the Oneida Business Committee or the General Tribal Council, depending on the topic involved, we would like to keep you abreast of the current legislation.

Three of these items are listed below:

1. Sanctions & Penalties – There will be outreach activities coming up regarding this law. The first one is scheduled on July 11th prior to the GTC Meeting. Other scheduled community outreach sessions are Wednesday, July 17th in the BC Conference Room at the Norbert Hill Center from 12:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m.; August 9th during the Veteran's Breakfast at the Veteran's Office on Riverdale Drive from 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 a.m.; and August 15th at the Oneida Farmer's Market in Water Circle Place from 12:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.

These meetings will allow you to offer input, ask questions and share ideas on this proposed new law. If you are unable to attend any one of these sessions, you may still submit written comments and/or suggestions to the LRO no later than August 31, 2019. Their office is located on the second floor of the NHC.

2. Domestic Animal Amendments were adopted by the OBC on May 8, some of the amendments include:
 - Eliminate administrative rulemaking authority delegated to the Environmental, Health, Safety, and Land Division and the Environmental Resource Board, and instead requires a jointly developed fine, penalty, and licensing fee schedule to be adopted by resolution.
 - Eliminate administrative rulemaking authority delegated to the Environmental, Health, Safety, and Land Division, the Emergency Management Coordinator, and the Comprehensive Health Division, and instead require standard operating procedures to be created related to disease investigations and quarantines.
 - Reduce the space requirements for dog kennels.
 - Provide guidelines and requirements for tethering an animal.
 - Reduce the limit on the number of dogs and cats allowed in a residential household but allow those who wish to seek an additional animal over the limit the ability to apply for a permit to do so.

- Require a person to obtain a conditional use permit to keep hens and limit the number of hens allowed on a residential lot.
- Eliminate the vicious animal designation, and create a single dangerous animal designation, with a requirement that any animal declared dangerous be removed from the Reservation or destroyed, pending the opportunity to contest the dangerous declaration.

3. Working on bylaws amendments with the expectation they will be completed by end of summer.

Again, I want to thank you, the general membership, for taking the time to read these articles and as always, I am available to meet with you, should you so desire. I can be reached at 869-4483 or you can e-mail me at djordan1@oneidation.org.

Shekoli Swakwek,

As summer approaches, we have a lot of events happening here in Oneida. We have the Oneida Powwow June 28-30 and the LPGA event at Thornberry Creek at Oneida during the week of 4th of July. With numerous graduation celebrations, congratulations to all the graduates and best wishes on the next chapter of your lives.

Within the past few months, our Tribal Action Plan team has been in transition from a 3-person volunteer team to moving under the Governmental Services Division due to all the entities and departments that this initiative involves. We are currently reviewing our strategy plan to bring it to a regional meeting next month to work on communication strategies, regional strategy, identify federal grants, training and technical assistance to advance tribal opioid strategic plans. Also with the new transition, we welcome the new General Manager, Debbie Thundercloud to take over the helm bringing new energy to the team.

During the FY19 approval process, I have worked on developing two endowments for our future generations to come. This summer will be the kick-off off initiating this process. The first is a Food Sovereignty Endowment, to create an endowment that will sustain food sovereignty initiatives indefinitely. The food sovereignty endowments will include but not limited to agroecology; a seed bank, food storage, food distribution system (working for food program), food education, localizing food systems, and to create production and consumptions systems. From a cultural standpoint, it is the responsibility of each one of our community members to contribute. To provide the opportunity to help yourself, have access to healthy food (not free), the right to healthy and culturally appropriate foods, and to reserve the right to define our own diet food and agricultural systems that align with our spiritual and cultural values.

Daniel Guzman-King

The second endowment is a Sovereign Sustainable Healthcare endowment. Which is to create a sovereign and sustainable healthcare system that is completely independent of the U.S. of state regulations, self-sustaining fiscally, utilizing holistic methods in ideology and in practice, utilizing natural means and Indigenous methods to heal and is culturally appropriate and respectful. Sovereign Sustainable Healthcare initiatives would include but not limited to alternative medical systems (complementary or in place of); integrative; functional medicine, utilizing natural products, traditional medicine, and education. The endowment is to be set up in order to sustain the healthcare system and guarantee a certain level of access to healthcare for generations to come. Goals would include utilizing traditional indigenous healthcare methods, prescribing food as medicine, Complementary and Alternative healthcare medical practices (CAM), encouraging Tsi?NiyukwalihoTá, increase access to healthcare and inspiring Yukwatsistayá.

A couple of weeks ago, I was fortunate enough to participate in bringing some of our Oneida High School Seniors out on a experiential learning trip to our homelands in what is now New York state. I believe everyone who attended the trip got something positive out of it. We all learned more about who we are and where we came from. We were able to walk where our ancestors walked; we were able to drink from the same natural springs our ancestors drank from. Everything we saw and did gave us a little inspiration and brought to life our history which we have learned about.

For those who may not be aware, Tet-watunhatenyehse (We are changing our lives) "Rites of Passage" youth group is in its 3rd year and fasting week is upon us. This week June 17-23, our young folks will be preparing for and going into their lodges for fasting. They have been attending classes almost every week for the last 6 months and are now ready to spend some time alone in prayer and fasting. This Sunday, June 23, at noon behind the Norbert Hill Center on the powwow grounds we will be welcoming back our nieces and nephews and returning them to their families. We will be having a potluck feast for our young fasters and the community is welcome to come join us in welcoming them back. We hope to see you there.

THUNDERHAWK TIMES

The Truth About Her, an essay from Shania Skenandore

By Shania Skenandore
Thunderhawk Times

They say she's doing good. They say she will succeed. They say she will get through it if she believes in herself. They say she's smart. They say she is strong. They say she will get through the hurt and the pain of the past. They say it's worth the stay if she fights a little longer.

But what if everything they say doesn't leave any impact on her? She feels numb. She doesn't know which way her life is going to go and is terrified. She is her own victim and abuser. She beats herself up and never gives herself a break. She is a victim of her own thoughts. Her thoughts always end up winning in the end no matter how much she fights them. She gives in to them and she believes everything that her mind tells her. She is her own worst enemy. She sees the devil in her own eyes and can't deny that the devil is there.

She used to be so happy. She used to love herself. She used to be full of light. She used to have hope within her. She used to walk around with a smile on her face. She used to see a future for herself. She used to love her family so much and look up to each and every single one.

Then, one day she watched herself deteriorate. She killed herself without actually leaving. She broke herself. She watched everyone she once loved so dearly fall apart and turn into ghosts. She watched them give in to the brain altering drug that stole them from her.

Her mind got angry so much, but her heart always cared. She loved hard, and that's what hurt her so bad. She began to wonder if people left her life because of her. They always left and the pain of the memory remains in her head. She sees illusions of who to believe and who to trust. She looked for love and happiness in a place where she lost it, and that's what had broke her the most.

Her heart has always been bigger than her own body. She never gave up on anyone. She would never leave unless they wanted her to, and even then she would not leave. She realized that people will always leave her life but will never leave her body, heart, and soul. The greatest pain is remembering things that hurt her so much and not knowing how to forget. She isn't quite sad, she feels empty and lost within herself.

They say everything will be okay in the end, knowing they don't know themselves if everything will be alright. They tell her to keep her head up, yet the weight of the world is on her shoulders. They tell her to keep fighting, when in reality she doesn't know what fighting looks like anymore. They tell her to be brave, yet she has no clue what the definition of brave is anymore. They say she's intelligent, when in the back of her mind she knows she's too smart for her own good. They tell her to enjoy her teen years, how does she do that when the child from inside has been ripped and stolen from her spirit.

She grew up faster than kids her age and that's what she struggled with. She doesn't know how to be a kid anymore.

She doesn't even know what that feels like anymore. She was 5 years old turning 16. She no longer felt any happiness after the day that her world turned upside down and all around. She no longer looked at her family the same. She no longer felt loved. She no longer felt herself, as if the girl had left her body and never returned.

From the author:

"I felt that this piece might help readers get a glimpse into what really goes on with people who are affected by life events that have changed them. People like to follow the stereotypes that go on with people with depression and people also do not understand how much words can actually affect a person. So, sharing this will help other kids my age know that they are not alone, because at times I felt alone and lost. This will also help adults understand more of what their child is going through. Not only am I trying to reach through to kids my own age but as well as adults. Adults struggle with knowing that is it okay to reach out for help. Not only that but as well trying to send the message of it's okay to not be okay." ~ Shania

My Scoop

New Lacrosse League

By CJ Summers
Thunderhawk Times

In the lacrosse world, there is two semi-professional teams, the Major Lacrosse League (MLL) field lacrosse and the National Lacrosse League (NLL) box lacrosse. Now there is new league coming this summer, the PLL. The Premier Lacrosse League games are going to be aired on NBC for the most part. Although the MLL and the NLL were aired but most of the people couldn't have access to those games.

The entrepreneur who made this all happen was Paul Rabil, who is an alumni from Johns Hopkins University. He played lacrosse there for his four years that he was there. Also his brother, Mike Rabil, is named CEO of the PLL. In the article, "How the Rabil Brothers Bet Big on a New Business Model and Built the Premier Lacrosse League" As Emily Caron, the author of this article, says that "Paul and Mike decided that they wanted to change the current professional lacrosse climate, they didn't initially intend to start an entirely new league. They first attempted to buy the existing entity: Major League Lacrosse."

There will be only six teams in the league though, but the major pro that I see with this new league coming up this summer, is it's going to be on NBC. Meaning that the sport of lacrosse will get more and more exposure to the world, and the sport will be getting more and more popular.

Pollution

By Shania Barber
Thunderhawk Times

There are so many environmental issues that occur nowadays. Any kind of human activity on the Earth is causing some type of side effects to happen. One of the biggest is pollution. We take our environment for granted and most people don't see a problem with it. Some of the main pollution types are environmental, air, water, deforestation, climate change, and garbage. Most pollution issues come from overpopulation and also the indiscriminate of natural resources without conserving them.

Maybe you're thinking, "how does this pollution affect me?" Well, the pollution effects every living thing on our planet and harms it. We cause most of the pollution that happens and we definitely will suffer the consequences if we don't stop. There are already environmental issues happening from it such as, global warming, contaminated seafood, increased cases in lung diseases, and more.

Air pollution affects our breathing and puts us all at a higher risk for asthma and other respiratory diseases. Living in severely polluted areas put people at a higher risk of getting cancer and the air damages the immune system, endocrine, and reproductive systems.

Water pollution also can cause severe issues. People can get hookworm, typhoid, and amoebiasis from drinking polluted water. Even a polluted beach can cause rashes, hepatitis, diarrhea, stomach aches, and vomiting. The water also affects the animals that live in the water.

We can stop the spread of pollution by using environment-friendly products, composting yard trimmings (grass,) reporting illegal dumpings, picking up after your pets, disposing of trash properly, recycling everything you can, and encouraging others to help save the environment as well. We are taking too much and not giving back to the earth and soon, it's not going to be savable.

Summer Sports Season Ahead!

By Malia Jacobs
Thunderhawk Times

After a trying spring – weather-wise – ONHS spring athletes are wrapping up their respective seasons and looking ahead.

The start of the 2019-2020 School Year isn't far off, but, before that, there's three months of rest and relaxation.

Well, maybe not.

Many ONHS athletes look to summer as a time to get ready for their next sport if they play more than one. Others look to it as a time to join competitive AAU teams to compete at the next level. They join AAU to be given the opportunity to be looked at college scouts.

A lot of student athletes use the summer as an off season, to get ready for the next year of school sports. They use it to get in shape, bulk up, or simply to just train.

Sports readily available in the Oneida community during the summer are;

football, volleyball, and cross country.

Interested athletes can get involved into these sports by contacting the coaches for the following sports.

For those not interested in the grind of organized sports over the summer, there are plenty of options. Swimming, running, golfing, tennis and others. There are many sports you can do on your own if you're not a team sport kind of person.

The Invention of the Nerf Gun

By Talon McLester
Thunderhawk Times

Reyn Guyer was an American inventor who came up with foam balls in the late 1960's. He invented the first foam ball and in 1969 which was the first Nerf Ball created.

The Nerf Ball turned out to be a success because it was a toy that children could play with that was safe to use. He invented the Nerf Gun about 20 years later. Then, the Blast-a-Ball was released which is basically a Nerf Blaster. This single-fire ball blaster gun shot 1 ball every 2 seconds.

After this, the Nerf Blast-a-Matic was released which released several balls before reloading. These two models were very successful and were found in almost every retail store from 1989-1993.

The Nerf Sharpshooter was the first Nerf gun that used darts. This model was released and was a part of the Nerf Original Series with the famous slogan for Nerf is "It's Nerf or Nothin." These darts evolved into Mega darts. This model still used darts that had fins.

These are still very popular today.

This writer had quite the collection of nerf guns growing up and shooting my friends and cousins with them. They even have swords that were foam and you can sword fight with them.

There are many different kinds of nerf guns. They include The Nerf Gun series has regular blasters, water blasters, rifles, laser guns and much more.

Gov. Evers re-forms Wisconsin pardons board Walker dropped

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – Gov. Tony Evers re-created Wisconsin's pardons board on Thursday, fulfilling a campaign promise to again consider granting pardons after his Republican predecessor, Scott Walker, halted the process eight years ago.

Evers, a Democrat, is putting his own mark on the process, declining to consider commutation of prison sentences as previous governors did and instituting a new restriction making people on the sex offender registry ineligible.

"I believe in forgiveness and the power of redemption," Evers said in a statement announcing his signing of an executive order creating the board. "People who have taken responsibility for their mistakes and who have worked to improve their lives and communities deserve a second chance."

Evers campaigned on the promise of re-starting the pardon board, but it took him six months to get it done. The state constitution gives the governor the power to grant pardons, so Evers doesn't need approval from the Republican-controlled Legislature, which so far has blocked most of his agenda.

His executive order released Thursday creates a nine-member pardon advisory board chaired by the governor's top lawyer, with appointees by Evers.

More than 1,400 pardon requests were pending when Walker stopped the process in November 2011 without explanation. Since Evers won in November, more than 1,600 people have contacted his office seeking a pardon or more information. Under Evers' program, pardon seekers must resubmit their applications starting Thursday.

Evers expressed frustration in April at how long it was taking his administration to restart the pardons process, saying his attorneys were too busy dealing with other legal issues. Among them were challenges to the lame-duck legislative session that Republicans called in December and used to pass several laws reducing his power.

A pardon doesn't erase or seal a conviction, but it does restore the right to own a gun; to vote; to be on a jury; to hold public office; and to hold various licenses. A pardon doesn't keep a person's criminal record from showing up on background checks, but applicants often say clemency makes them more attractive to employers.

Many of those seeking pardons say their attempts to get better jobs and improve their lives are hindered by the conviction, while others are seeking to clear their names years after a crime.

One person who had contacted Evers about a pardon was the attorney for Laurie Bembenek, a woman at the center of one of Wisconsin's most notorious crime sagas. The former Milwaukee police officer and Playboy club hostess was convicted of killing her then-husband's ex-wife in 1982 but died in 2010 while an earlier pardon request was pending.

Bembenek's attorney, Mary Woehrer, said she would resubmit the pardon request as soon as possible.

Under the process Evers established, the applicant must have completed their entire sentence, including probation, parole or extended supervision, at least five years before applying for a pardon. Previous governors allowed for applicants to seek a waiver to that requirement.

Applicants must also not have been convicted of a new offense since completing their sentence and they can't be registered as a sex offender, a new requirement.

Evers won't consider commuting current prison sentences, something other governors before Walker did look at but rarely did. The last time a governor commuted a prison sentence was in 1995.

The first board appointed by Evers includes former Madison Police Chief Noble Wray, who retired in 2013; Jerry Hancock, director of the Prison Ministry Project; and retired Milwaukee County Circuit Judge Jeffrey Kremers, who stepped down in 2018 after 26 years as a judge. He was Attorney General Josh Kaul's nominee.

Evers' attorney, Ryan Nilsestuen, will chair the board. Other appointees are Nate Holton, director of diversity and inclusion for the Milwaukee County Transit System; Cindy O'Donnell, a former deputy director of the state Department of Corrections under both Republican and Democratic governors; Nadya Perez-Reyes, legislative adviser for the Department of Children and Families; and Myrna Warrington, director of vocational rehabilitation on the Menominee

Indian reservation.

Evers has the final decision.

Pardons were commonly issued by both Republican and Democratic governors prior to Walker. Republicans Tommy Thompson and his successor, Scott McCallum, issued a combined 262 pardons from 1987 through 2002. Democrat Jim Doyle granted nearly 300 during his eight years in office.

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. (AP) – Democratic Gov. Tony Evers signaled Monday that he doesn't support Republican budget moves that would raise car registration fees to pay for road repairs, saying the plan exacts nothing from out-of-state drivers.

Evers' proposed state budget calls for an additional $624 million in transportation funding that would be generated in part by raising the state gas tax by 8 cents per gallon.

Republicans who control the Legislature's finance committee erased Evers' plan from the budget earlier this month.

They inserted their own language calling for spending an additional $483.7 million, generated by raising title fees from $95 to $164; increasing the $75 car registration fee to $85; standardizing SUV and minivan fees at $100; and amending the definition of hybrid vehicles so that the Department of Transportation can impose a new $75 fee on all versions of the vehicles.

Evers said during a news conference Monday to celebrate June as "Pride Month" for the LGBT community that raising registration fees doesn't make any sense because out-of-state drivers would pay nothing for using Wisconsin roads. Democrats on the finance committee sounded the same refrain earlier this month, calling the gas tax increase the fairest way to generate revenue.

The transportation funding wasn't the only change the finance committee made to the budget. The panel also stripped out dozens of Evers policy proposals, including expanding Medicaid and legalizing marijuana.

The full Assembly and Senate are expected to vote on the spending plan next week. Both chambers must pass an identical version of the document. Republicans control both chambers but a group of Republican fiscal hawks in the Senate has been complaining publicly that the budget spends too much on road and building projects. That could mean changes in the budget to appease them.

Once the budget clears the Legislature it will go back to Evers. He could sign it into law, veto it or use his partial veto power to rewrite sections and make the document more palatable to Democrats.

Evers declined to comment Monday on what he would do, saying he'll wait to see what emerges from the Legislature.

He said his staff plans to contact Republican leaders before the chambers vote to discuss the budget, but he expects that only Republican legislators will be able to force further revisions at this point.

Kit Beyer, a spokeswoman for Assembly Speaker Robin Vos, didn't immediately respond to an email. Senate Majority Leader Scott Fitzgerald said raising the gas tax isn't an option because it will result only in diminishing revenue as cars become more fuel efficient and more people turn to electric vehicles.

"Hiking the gas tax isn't a long-term solution," Fitzgerald said. "It's a Band-Aid that practically guarantees we'll have to go back to the taxpayers and beg for more of their money in the future."

Choosing the Best is Evidence-Based

By: Candi Cornelius, MSN RN

Choosing the Best curriculum is consistent with federal guidelines for abstinence education and is evidence-based. One study indicated that students who received Choosing the Best were nearly 1.5 times more likely to delay the onset of sexual behaviors than students who did not receive the program. Oneida Nation School System in cooperation with Oneida Community Health Department has been consistently implementing the program for grades six through eleventh. School year 2018-2019 marked 7 years of teaching curriculum!

Grade:	Program:	Data & Lesson Description:
6 th Choosing the Best WAY		1 in 10 kids reports losing virginity before age 13. Early intervention is vital to lifelong health. The six lessons teach abstinence as the best way to show respect for yourself and others.
7 th Choosing the Best PATH		1 in 5 Americans over age 12 contract genital herpes. The eight lessons teach assertiveness, how to say "NO" to premarital sex and "YES" to healthy relationships.
8 th Choosing the Best LIFE		¼ of new STDs occur among 15-19 year old boys and girls. The eight lessons review facts about health risks and give students the emotional strength and self-discipline to commit to abstinence.
9 th / 10 th Choosing the Best JOURNEY		The percentage of students who have had sex increases from 28 % to 44 % between 8th and 10th grade. The eight lessons motivate students to set goals, make good decisions, develop healthy relationships, and choose abstinence.
11 th / 12 th Choosing the Best SOUL MATE		The five lessons includes learning about how to determine partner compatibility, communication techniques and the importance of abstinence. Cohabitation myths are also discussed.

Eastern Shoshone Tribe files lawsuit against opioid makers

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) – The Eastern Shoshone Tribe in Wyoming has joined a growing list of municipalities and groups nationwide in suing the makers and distributors of prescription painkillers.

The Casper Star-Tribune reports the tribe announced Tuesday it had filed a federal lawsuit against two dozen companies, claiming they used deceptive marketing to convince doctors to prescribe opioids for treatment of chronic pain.

The tribe says the opioid crisis has caused substantial increases in child welfare and social service costs.

The lawsuit notes the opioid crisis has disproportionately affected Native Americans.

The lawsuit is similar to those filed by other Wyoming entities, including the city of Casper and the Northern Arapaho Tribe.

Kali photos/Christopher Johnson

Native American Tourism of Wisconsin (NATOW), American Indian Alaska Native Tourism Association (AIANTA), and Brand USA sponsored a four-day whirlwind tour of several of Wisconsin's Tribal Nations for seven Italian tourism managers and journalists. The guests were in Wisconsin from June 6-10 and visited the Oneida Nation Reservation June 10. During their visit, they were treated to a reservation tour, a traditional meal, songs, and a performance by Oneida smoke dancers. The purpose of the collaboration was to provide an experiential visit for tourists in the hopes that Oneida and other Wisconsin Tribal Nations will become future options for visiting foreign tourists.

Winnebago Tribal Chairman Frank White said LaMere's death is a "great loss for the tribe."

"Frank was instrumental in bringing to light a lot of issues concerning Native Americans," White said.

Judi gaiashkibos, executive director of the Nebraska Commission on Indian Affairs, said LaMere also had a talent for connecting with people, regardless of their views.

"He could get along with all kinds of people, and I think that was why he was so effective," she said.

LaMere was also a prominent critic of how the Omaha Police Department treated Zachary BearHeels, a mentally ill Native American man who died in 2017 after officers punched and shocked him with a stun gun.

LaMere was also active in the Nebraska Democratic Party. He served on the Democratic National Committee from 1996 through 2009 and was a delegate for multiple party conventions. He was a member of the American Indian Movement.

Youth of Today are our Farmers of Tomorrow

Members of Falling Leaves 4-H Club planted berry bushes and fruit trees, such as the pear trees pictured, on May 30. 4-H develops "farmers of tomorrow" by introducing youth to agriculture.

By William Ver Voort
Integrated Food System Coordinator

Like most gardeners and farmers this spring, it has been tough to get the crops in the ground, but we managed to plant between the rain drops. On Thursday, May 30 several members of the Oneida Falling Leaves 4-H club with the assistance of some of the Nation's departments, along with community member volunteers, were able to finally plant our Youth Ag workshop berry bushes and fruit trees.

The Oneida Conservation Department hand dug 56 holes, for the ground was too wet for their equipment. Then with the help of the Oneida Zoning Department and community members the 4-H folks planted 32 berry bushes including strawberry (not a bush), blackberry, elderberry, raspberry and blueberry bushes.

Then we went to work on the fruit trees where we planted 24 fruit trees including apple, pear, plum and cherry trees. These activities are part of the 'Youth of Today are our Farmers of Tomorrow' project. With this project we are trying to interest youth in agricultural careers. This project is funded by a grant from the USDA's Office of Partnership and Public Engagement.

It is our hope that in the future we will be able to turn this 4-H land into an Agricultural Youth Education Center where it could serve as a means of continuing to build interest in farming and help build the Tribes farming base. A recent study shows that more than 40% of American farmland is owned by seniors aged 65 and older. As they retire, their land is becoming vulnerable to being lost to real estate development as farm families look to pay for retirement and see few alternatives for selling their land. The loss of this land resource is the one thing that future farmers cannot overcome or recover from.

We would like to extend our huge appreciation for the help from the Oneida Conservation Department, the Oneida Zoning Department, the community member volunteers and the Oneida Falling Leaves 4-H club. With special thanks to the USDA's Office of Partnership and Public Engagement for making this project possible.

Protect yourself and others by learning about elder abuse

The Older Americans Act (OAA) funds critical services that keep older adults healthy and independent—services like meals, job training, senior centers, caregiver support, transportation, elder abuse prevention, health promotion, benefits enrollment, and more.

What is elder abuse?

Elder abuse is recognized as a continually increasing and serious problem in our society. Unfortunately, due to under-reporting, variations in the definition of elder abuse, and the absence of a nationwide uniform reporting system, it is difficult to determine the scope of this issue. The National Center on Elder Abuse distinguishes between seven different types of elder abuse. These include physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional abuse, financial/material exploitation, neglect, abandonment, and self-neglect.

- Physical abuse. Use of physical force that may result in bodily injury, physical pain, or impairment.

- Sexual abuse. Non-consensual sexual contact of any kind with an elderly person.
- Emotional abuse. Infliction of anguish, pain, or distress through verbal or non-verbal acts.
- Financial/material exploitation. Illegal or improper use of an elder's funds, property, or assets.
- Neglect. Refusal, or failure, to fulfill any part of a person's obligations or duties to an elderly person.

- Abandonment. Desertion of an elderly person by an individual who has physical custody of the elder or by a person who has assumed responsibility for providing care to the elder.
- Self-neglect. Behaviors of an elderly person that threaten the elder's health or safety.

Prevalence & Incidence

Currently, there are no official national statistics relating to the prevalence of this dilemma. However, current research estimates that approximately 1 to 2 million Americans, age 65 or older have been abused or neglected by the very people they entrust with their care and protection (National Center on Elder Abuse, 2005).

Demographics

The majority of elder abuse victims are female, whereas the majority of the perpetrators are male. Overall, adult children are most often the perpetrators of elder abuse, followed by other family members and spouses. Unfortunately, institutional abuse of the elderly (i.e. hospitals, convalescent homes, and board-and-care homes) is also becoming a major concern, particularly since more families are unable to provide appropriate care for the elderly at home.

Data: Fatal falls remain high among Wisconsin's elderly

MADISON, Wis. (AP) ~ Fatal falls among Wisconsin's aged remain high because of a growing population, lifestyle hazards and better reporting, according to advocates for the elderly.

The Wisconsin Department of Health Services recently released data showing 1,393 residents age 65 and older accidentally fell to their deaths in 2017. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports show Wisconsin routinely ranks highest in the country for elderly fatal falls.

The findings come as state health officials estimate the number of residents 65 and older will increase between 2010 and 2040 from 14% to 24%, Wisconsin Public Radio reported.

"Some folks point to higher rates of obesity which makes you more unsteady as well as the higher rates of alcohol imbibing here in Wisconsin," said Betsy Abramson, the Wisconsin Institute for Healthy Aging's executive director.

The group and others are working to prevent falls through home modifications, medication reviews, vision screening and a program called Stepping On.

Stepping On meets with elderly residents in group settings to introduce strength and balancing exercises, while teaching of home hazards, safe footwear, safety in public places and coping after a fall. Abramson said the program can reduce falls by 31%.

Gov. Tony Evers' budget proposal set aside $500,000 for state grants over two years intended for healthy aging programs, including Stepping On and others focused on falling prevention. But the Legislature's budget-writing Joint Finance Committee dropped the funding from their budget this month.

Republicans, who control both the committee and the state Legislature, have nearly finished reshaping the state budget to reflect their priorities, removing much of Evers' proposals. The committee could send the budget to the full Legislature as early as this week.

"We are extremely disappointed," Abramson said. "Investments in prevention are super important, especially for falls prevention when (the state) has a rapidly aging population."

Oklahoma base set for migrant site was WWII internment camp

By Adam Kealoha Causey
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) ~ A U.S. Army base in Oklahoma that the federal government says will temporarily house children crossing the border without their parents was used during World War II as a Japanese internment camp.

Historical data from the National Park Service and private organizations show Fort Sill was among at least 14 Army and Department of Justice facilities nationwide where Japanese Americans and Japanese immigrants were interred. The Army's War Relocation Authority held about 120,000 Japanese and Japanese Americans in "relocation centers" during the war with Japan.

Tom Ikeda, executive director of Den-sho, an organization that documents the history of the United States' internment of Japanese people, referred to Fort Sill as "a place layered in trauma." He pointed to its use as a boarding school for Native American children and as a prisoner-of-war camp for Apache tribal members.

"Sites like this need to be permanently closed, not recycled to inflict more harm," Ikeda said Wednesday in a statement. "We need to stay vigilant and we need to be showing up at these places in protest. No one showed up for Japanese Americans during WWII, but we can and we must break that pattern now."

The Obama administration also used Fort Sill to house unaccompanied migrant children during a migration surge in 2014.

Ikeda's perspective echoed calls last year from state and federal leaders and locals who objected to the Trump administration looking into housing immigrant children near the site of a former internment camp in Rohwer, Arkansas. Those plans were scrapped.

The Office of Refugee Resettlement, overseen by the Department of Health and Human Services, said Tuesday it plans to house up to 1,400 migrant children at Fort Sill, near Lawton, Oklahoma, about 90 miles (145 kilometers) southwest of Oklahoma City.

An emailed request for comment

Wednesday from the department was not returned. In a letter dated Wednesday, Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar and acting Homeland Security Secretary Kevin McAleenan asked Congress to appropriate $4.5 billion in emergency funding requested to "address the immediate humanitarian crisis at our southern border."

Record numbers of unaccompanied children have been arriving at the border, largely from Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador. In May, border agents apprehended 11,507 children traveling alone. The Office of Refugee Resettlement has come under fire for the death of two children who went through the agency's network of shelters and is facing lawsuits over the treatment of teens in its care. The office has said it must set up new facilities to accommodate new arrivals or risk running out of beds.

Fort Sill spokesman Darrell Ames said the post's information indicates that following America's entry into World War II, the government directed the base to build internment camps for Japanese Americans, but nothing in the record reflects the camps were actually occupied by Japanese Americans. Instead, the camps were used by prisoners of war from Japan, Germany and Italy.

Officials at the Fort Sill National Historic Landmark & Museum said they have no information about the base's use as an internment or POW camp because that part of its history is not part of its mission statement.

Shawn Iwaoka, who works in collections at the Japanese American National Museum in Los Angeles, said confusion abounds because camps were referred to by different names, including "relocation centers" or "detention camps," and because the camp at Fort Sill was much smaller than camps such as Manzanar in California, which housed thousands of people. The museum's collection includes letters a man detained at Fort Sill wrote to his wife at another camp in California with a pre-printed label that said "internee of war."

"The euphemisms were rampant to kind of soften what they really were.

The museum's position is that they should be called concentration camps," Iwaoka said. "They were going into people's homes and forcing them to leave their property."

It's unclear exactly when the camp at Fort Sill opened, but an encyclopedia Den-sho publishes shows it closed in June 1942, almost seven months after the Japanese bombed the American fleet in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. That pushed the U.S. into war and led the government to open internment camps.

Den-sho's records and the book "Confinement and Ethnicity: An Overview of World War II Japanese American Relocation Sites," included on the National Park Service website, show from 359 to more than 700 people were interred at Fort Sill, including three German nationals. A guard shot a Japanese man to death while he was distraught and trying to escape. The Den-sho Encyclopedia says detainees lived in tents and that summer temperatures climbed to 100 degrees Fahrenheit (37.8 degrees Celsius).

Associated Press writers Tim Talley in Oklahoma City and Susan Montoya Bryan in Albuquerque, New Mexico, contributed to this report.

Watchdog to investigate Interior moves on Utah monument

By Brady McCombs

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) ~ A government watchdog will investigate whether the U.S. Interior Department broke the law by making plans to open lands cut from a Utah national monument by President Donald Trump to leasing for oil, gas and coal development, a pair of Democratic congress members said Monday.

The Government Accountability Office's investigation into whether the Interior violated the appropriations law by using funds to assess potential resource extraction in the lands cut from the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument is the latest chapter in a long-running saga over the sprawling monument created in 1996 on lands home to scenic cliffs, canyons, dinosaur fossils and coal reserves.

Trump slashed the monument by nearly half in 2017 following a contentious review by former Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke of monuments around the country. Trump ordered the review based on arguments by him and others that a law signed by President Theodore Roosevelt allowing presidents to declare monuments had been improperly used to protect wide expanses of lands instead of places with particular historical or archaeological value.

The GAO investigation comes after U.S. Sen. Tom Udall of New Mexico and U.S. Rep. Betty McCollum of Minnesota, both Democrats, requested the investigation in May. They argue that a section of the appropriations law on the books since 2002 states that no taxpayer money can be used to do pre-leasing studies on lands in monuments that were created by Jan. 20, 2001.

Last year, the Interior made public proposals for managing Grand Staircase, saying its preference for one of the sites would be the "least restrictive to energy and mining development." That plan also would allow commercial timber harvesting to keep forests healthy.

The public comment period closed on the proposals and the Bureau of Land Management's website says it intends to finalize the plans later this year.

Interior Department Press Secretary Molly Block said in a statement the agency will provide "factual information" to the GAO and is "confident" the probe will determine the Interior "acted appropriately and within the law."

GAO spokesman Charles Young confirmed the inquiry. He said it's too early to know how long the probe into the legal question will take.

Trump in 2017 also downsized the Bears Ears National Monument in Utah, but that won't be part of the GAO's inquiry because it was created in 2016 by President Barack Obama.

Environmental, tribal, paleontological and outdoor recreation organizations have separate lawsuits pending to restore the full sizes of the monuments, arguing presidents don't have the legal authority to undo or change monuments created by predecessors.

Udall and McCollum announced the GAO investigation in a joint news release. Udall is the ranking member of the Senate's Appropriations Subcommittees on the Interior, Environment and Related Agencies. McCollum is chair of the same committee in the House.

Udall called on the Interior to halt work on proposed management plans until the GAO makes its determination on the legal question.

"National monuments like Grand Staircase-Escalante protect some of our most spectacular wilderness areas and breathtaking lands, and it is imperative that the Department manage them in accordance with the laws passed by Congress," Udall said in the news release.

Dan Pine visits Oneida

Ojibway Elder Dan teaches the class how to harvest the inner bark of a pin cherry tree. Adriana Pelky and another participant strip the inner bark as Dan Pine gives instructions.

Ojibway elder Dan Pine from Canada visited the Oneida community earlier this June. There were multiple sessions that the community could attend each one different. In each session Randy Cornelius introduced Dan to class. Randy would also go over the Oneida Nature Glossary that has many different Nature words in the Oneida Language. He taught the classes a brief Oyu'kwa'u-we (tobacco) speech that is customary that prior to taking anything from the natural world we always offer Oyu'kwa'u-we. Randy also talked about the notes that Huron Smith put together when he came to Oneida, Wisconsin in 1929. The Milwaukee Public Museum has now taken to time to put together this information online. <https://bit.ly/2Fa88tj>

Afterwards Randy and Dan took the class to different locations on the Reservation to search for medicines. Some of the sessions Dan Pine taught the class to make medicine including Pin Cherry Bark Tea, Bloodroot root tea, and Juniper Needle Tea.

Harvesting Bloodroot with Dan Pine & Randy Cornelius

Oneida Cultural Heritage staff gathered Bloodroot under the tutelage of Ojibway elder Dan Pine. The root, pictured above, can be made into a tea to treat aches and pains, but can be toxic if used in excess. Left: Bloodroot has a broad leaf and can be found near water such as along the banks of Duck Creek.

During Dan Pine's visit at Oneida Cultural Heritage he taught a class of community members how to make Bloodroot root Tea. During the session Dan and Randy Cornelius took the class out in to the woods and looked for bloodroot. Bloodroot likes to be by water and some was found along the Duck Creek. Randy gave an Oyu'kwa'u-wé (The Indigenous Tobacco) offering speech to the plant before the class harvested the Bloodroot roots. When the speech is done it is given to largest plant and the smaller ones are harvested.

After the class harvested a good amount they headed back to Oneida Cultural Heritage Cottage and made the tea. When making the tea the root that is used should be finger length. It needed to be washed to get all the dirt off and then put into two cups of water and boil and simmered for at least 15 minutes. Dan said no more than a ¼ cup should be taken. All your pain should be gone. He would say a lot that it is better than morphine. However, bloodroot is toxic, so he said that it should only be taken once a week for a short while.

Bloodroot is good for pain, arthritis pain, also good for headaches and migraines.

WHO & WHEN? Come to the Library to Find Out!

The Oneida Community Library began a new program called Women's History in Oneida & Women Honoring Engaging Natives. We usually call it by its acronym, or initials, WHO & WHEN. It's a program that isn't just library people talking at you, but we all sit around and talk about Oneida women, and share stories. For March, April, and May we read and shared a book called, Laura Cornelius Kellogg: Our Democracy and the American Indian and Other Works (The Iroquois and Their Neighbors series) by Kristina Ackley (Editor) and Cristina Stanciu (Editor.) The book is fascinating! It's more than just Ms. Kellogg's works, it's also a biography about her, a controversial woman. We have copies available for checkout at both libraries.

We call WHO & WHEN an interactive program because we want everyone sharing Oneida stories, and hope that the community will come in and talk about Oneida women they know. We are off for the summer and will have our next session start in September. After December, we'll take a small break and start again in March. WHO & WHEN will have spring sessions and fall sessions, March – May and then October-December, and we'll have a book and short stories to talk about every session. Other Oneida women we've talked and shared about include Anna John and Maria Hinton. We hope you'll join us!

Museum's Object of the Month

By Katelyn Garza

Oneida Museum Specialist

June is home to Father's Day, and so this month's object also recognizes a father. It is a painting by artist, Ernest Smith. The painting depicts a scene from one version of our Creation Story in which the Right-Handed Twin asks his grandmother where he can find his father. Skywoman, his grandmother, tells him to travel to the East. The painting illustrates the great obstacles that the twin had to endure to reach his father, and the label that is framed with it reads "Braving the test of fire. The many obstacles that man has to overcome in his travel through life".
